SIMPLE CHANGES TO THE UTILITY ROOM CAN GO A LONG WAY

By Kit Davey

Most utility rooms are drab, cluttered pits somewhere in the darkest corner of a home. With just a little creativity and energy you can improve the function and appearance of your utility room, and make your chores more enjoyable. Here are a few simple changes that require elbow grease:

Get organized. Set aside several hours to go through every cabinet and drawer. Remove any papers tacked to walls or items stacked on top of cabinets or stashed in corners. Get rid of broken, seldom-used or expired items and retain only things you actually use.

When returning things to the shelves and cabinetry keep like objects together (carpentry tools on one shelf, detergents on another, etc.) and place the most often used items next to where you do the work or on easily reached shelves. You might even want to use a label maker to create labels indicating where things should get stashed.

Increase storage. Invest in shelf inserts to take advantage of vertical space and pullouts to access the deep recesses of your cabinets. Place hooks on the back of the doors or inside the cabinetry. Use boxes, caddies or bins to keep loose objects together. For reasonably priced organizing and storage products, try Target, Home Depot and the catalog company Lilian Vernon.

Add wall-mounted shelving over the washer/dryer. Storing the ironing board is always a problem — why not hang it from the back of the door with a door hook available at your local hardware store?

If you're really handy, you can install a recessed ironing board (available through appliance stores) or a recessed wall cabinet. These space-saving units fit between the studs in your wall and come in wood

CHEMICALS IN AIR FRESHENERS
LINKED TO LUNG DAMAGE

By Forrest Linebarger

A new study, just released by the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, provides evidence that air fresheners reduce the lung capacity in people exposed to them in typical indoor environments. It sort of takes the “fresh” out of air fresheners.

It's not just air fresheners either, toilet bowl deodorizers and mothballs also contain the suspect chemical, 1,4-dichlorobenzene (1,4-DCB).

Ironically, it is those of us that think we are keeping our homes the cleanest that are probably most affected. The 10 percent of folks with the highest exposure to air fresheners, mothballs, toilet deodorizers, and other products with 1,4-DCB show the greatest loss in pulmonary function.

Fortunately, reducing exposure to 1,4-DCB seems to restore or paint-grade finishes.

Spruce up the cabinets.

Repaint dark cabinets white, or use a good furniture oil to restore your old wood cabinet's luster. Change outdated pulls and knobs. Restoration Hardware and Home Depot have nice selections. Why not hang a tassel or charm from one of them?

Floor coverings. Want to transform that horrid linoleum without ripping it up? Many paint manufacturers offer paint that can be applied onto vinyl or linoleum floors. Apply a checkerboard pattern or paint on a "rug" over your old floor. If you're not handy with a brush, why not just cover the floor with a colorful area rug from Pier One or Cost Plus?

Window treatment. If privacy is not an issue, try no window covering at all. Replace outdated curtains with pleated shades, mini-blinds or shutters (Try 3 Day Blinds and Home Depot for great prices). Ready-made shades in rice paper and bamboo are available through Pier One and Cost Plus.

Make your own simple cafe curtains by recycling fabric you already have (from an old dress, sheet, dish towels, scarves, etc.). If you're not into sewing, order ready-made window coverings from the Country Curtain catalog, (800) 456-0321. Or, hang an antique stained-glass window in front of your old window. For a natural curtain, install a narrow shelf across the window and place three to five potted ivies and let their tendrils trail down over the opening.

Lighting. Brighten the room by cleaning the overhead fix-ture and using the maximum wattage bulbs allowed. Add warmth by placing a small table lamp on the countertop or shelf.

Wall treatment. Enhance a tired paint job by sponging or ragging over it in your favorite color. Or, alternate four- to six-inch stripes of color with bands of the old paint. Stencil a pattern below the ceiling line or around the door and window frames. Paint over old wallpaper (yes, it can be done!) or repaper in a pattern with a light background to reflect more light into the space.

Decorative touches. Give the room personality and charm by displaying art and accessories that you enjoy. Hang your grandmother's plate collection, your straw hats or masks, or your kid's artwork on the wall, over the window and doorway. Place a pretty bowl with pot-pourri, beach stones, buttons or marbles in it on the shelf. Hang family photos, or lean them on a shelf. Add a live plant or two. Set up a mini TV or radio to keep you company. ▀

MURPHY BEDS SAVE SPACE, OFFER COMFORT

By Carol Blitzer

Even a five-bedroom house can get a little crowded at times. That's why Zale and Aileen Mitchner of Mountain View chose to turn their fifth bedroom into a combo home office/guest room.

"My wife will principally use it as an office, but we also want to accommodate guests," Zale Mitchner said, noting that his wife's parents were due for a visit soon from the East Coast.

In addition, they wanted an extra play area for their children, "so we didn't want a lot of extra furniture in the room," he added.

The Mitchners aren't alone in looking to wall beds, aka "Murphy beds," to solve their multipurpose space problem. (According to Wikipedia, the original Murphy bed was named for William L. Murphy, a San Francisco inventor, who patented his bed that folded down from a wall in 1916. Although the Murphy Bed Co. is still in business, an appellate court held in 1989 that the term "Murphy bed" was used so commonly for "wall bed" that it lost its trademark protection.)

"It seems like people are very interested in wallbeds/murphy beds right now," said Liz Roller, owner of Wallbeds 'n' More in Dublin. She points to the dot-com era as a compelling reason: "More people are working out of their homes and need to utilize space for both guests and work.”

Donna Cederlund, general manager of Budget Closet, Inc. in Santa Cruz, said, “We will most likely see more people requesting them [wall beds] this fall as kids go away to college and parents decide to re-purpose bedrooms for craft rooms and home offices without removing the bed altogether. Wall beds provide greater utility and function with otherwise underused space.”

The Mitchners solved their multipurpose room problem by calling in Valet Organizers of Los Altos to create a custom-built wall bed along one wall and a desk along another, all surrounded by cabinets — often with multiple functions. Open the cabinet next to the wall bed, for example, and you’ll find an instant fold-out table for an alarm clock.

“It looks so nice. Once it was done, it almost made the room seem bigger,” Mitchner said of the 10-by-10-foot space. And, the wall bed is “far more comfortable than a sofa bed,” he said.

“Guests come two to three times a year, but you need a room every day,” added Larry Fox, president of Valet Organizers.

Fox said half of his customers “are incorporating an entire solution,” which involves other cabinetry besides a wall bed. Lately, many of his customers seeking to maximize their living/sleeping areas have come from the new Classic Residence by Hyatt. The “his and hers” twin wall beds are popular in retirement communities, Fox said.

But his most popular model is the queen wall bed, which runs $2,500 to $4,500 including installation. Affecting the cost are such variables as crown molding, lighting, depth of the bed, decorative fronts and wood finishes.

“We build the cabinetry around the frame. There are no kits,” he said, noting that it’s not uncommon to build a $20,000 room. “Twenty to 30 percent of the cost could be in decorative appointments,” he added.

In the future, he plans to have a fold-out table incorporated into the front paneling. Other features available include a built-in entertainment center (with a TV on a swivel), glass insets and drawers on rollers. Wall beds also come in horizontal side-tilts.

Valet Organizers’ systems are made both of laminates and wood. “The reason laminates are so popular is they’re less expensive than wood and significantly more durable — and they’re very authentic-looking,” Fox said.

Because each wall bed is a custom product it usually takes between four and eight weeks between ordering the bed and installation. “Fall is wall-bed season,” he said, since people often want their guest space ready before Thanksgiving.

Grennan’s in Campbell also offers custom-configured Murphy beds, manufactured to order. The best seller at Grennan’s is the classic queen-sized bed, which starts at about $2,000, delivered and installed in the Bay Area, according to Jack Kennedy, sales manager. Custom cabinetry is extra, and ranges from contemporary to traditional, with options in Mission Style and Craftsman. Most orders can be filled in about five weeks, depending on how elaborate.

Grennan’s also offers a hidden bed for about $1,295, which isn’t attached to the wall. Kennedy points out that their hidden bed is more like an upright piano: Picture the bed in the upright position, and a huge table desk in the keyboard position. As the table goes down, the twin bed drops to the floor. “It’s particularly loved by kids,” he said.

Wallbeds ‘n’ More offers a similar combo computer desk and hidden bed in twin and full versions, with an optional hutch ($1,600-$2,150).

Wallbeds ‘n’ More fits more the “bed in a box” concept, where it’s possible to walk in off the street, order a bed and have it installed the next day, according to Liz Roller.

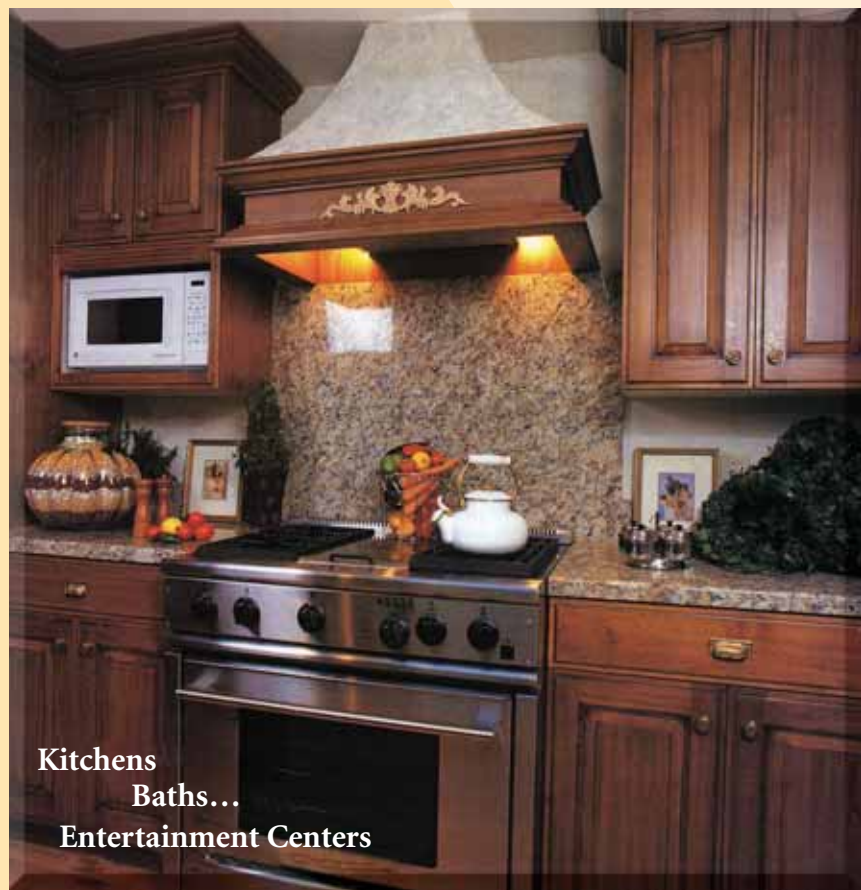

As for space requirements, all you need for a queen size bed is 65 inches wide, 17 inches deep, by 91 inches tall, she said. When open, the bed will extend 85 inches from the wall to the end of the bed.

Cabinetry is made of hardwood and plywood with a choice of birch, oak or pine veneers, with a variety of stain or finish colors. Beds come in twin, full or queen, but the top seller is the queen. Cost is $1,500 to $1,850 without the mattress (available for another $400-$450) plus delivery and installation ($225-300).

Wallbeds ‘n’ More beds can accommodate a standard mattress no more than 11 inches thick, and one cannot put a pillowtop mattress in there, Roller said. “The tray is like a platform bed. The tray acts as a mattress’ box spring,” she said.

Prefabricated side cabinets — even a closet — are available. Most items take four to six weeks to order, but if everything is in stock, “you could purchase today and install tomorrow,” Roller said. ■

Artist Reception, August 19th, 5 – 8 pm

The impressionistic collection of new original works in oil will be unveiled on August 19 at the artist's reception hosted by Galleria Luna Fine Art from 5 to 8 pm. Rendered at different times of the day, lavender and violet foggy days and warm sienna and shades-of-red rainy nights of the city are but a small sample of Taylor's brilliant expression of city light reflections. The viewer will be dazzled by the romance of the city lights whether from a warm glow of light from lampposts, head and tail lights or market windows.

some of the loss of lung function. However, since these products emit VOCs for their entire useful life and then are replaced by new ones, the impact tends to be chronic.

This follows a study last year that linked the use of cleaning product solvents such as toluene and benzene with the incidence of asthma in young children. The affects are profound: for every 10-unit increase in the concentration of toluene and benzene ($\mu\text{g}/\text{m}^3$) the incidence of asthma increased by about two and three times, respectively.

Many other studies connect high VOC levels in cleaning products with profound health effects such as respiratory illnesses, depression, headaches, lung cancer and strokes.

If a manufacturer decides to test its cleaning product and finds it harmful, that fact must be reported to the Consumer Product Safety Commission. Sadly, in one of those strange twists of government, manufacturers are not required to test products for health at all — so potentially dangerous products often go untested. It is estimated that only about 30 percent of the chemicals commonly found in household products have been tested for their impact on human health.

Aerosols are also of great concern as they often contain chemicals that can affect the nervous system, such as hexane and xylene. Epidemiologists at the University of Bristol studied 14,000 pregnant women to determine the effects of aerosols and air fresheners. Their results were stunning. They found that those participants who used such products the most suffered a quarter more headaches than those that used them least. They also found that in frequent users post-natal depression was up 19 percent and diarrhea was up 20 percent in their babies. Who would have guessed that simple cleaning products could have such an impact on family health?

Before you let your house turn into a pig sty, you will be happy to know there are simple and effective alternatives, many of them much less expensive than the harmful cleaners we buy in stores.

Here are some examples of natural cleaning products that can be made in your home by mixing common household goods together:

All-purpose Cleaner

- 1/2 cup vinegar
- 1/4 cup baking soda
- 1/2 gallon water

Furniture Polish

- 1 teaspoon olive oil
- 1 lemon
- 1 teaspoon water

Glass Cleaner

- 1/4 cup white vinegar
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 1 quart warm water

Oven cleaner

- 1 cup baking soda
- add water until paste develops
- clean with scouring pad and spatula

Drain cleaner

- pour 1/2 cup baking soda into drain first
- add 1/2 cup vinegar, let fizz a few minutes
- add three quarts of boiling water
- repeat if necessary

No matter what glass cleaner you use, you can avoid streaking by using crumpled newspaper instead of paper towels, which has the additional benefit of onsite recycling.

If you prefer store-bought products, VOC-free products are available locally at Eco Design Resources in San Carlos (www.ecodesignresources.com) or can be ordered online at companies such as www.greenhome.com.

Why pollute the air quality of our houses when natural cleaners are so easy to use? Now that our eyes are open to the ill effects cleaners have on the health of our families, maybe it's time to change our habits. ■
