Alza, city turn landfill gas into energy and cash

By Daniel DeBolt

The city of Mountain View has joined forces with Alza Corp. in turning the methane gas under Shoreline Park into electricity.

The gas, produced by biodegrading landfill garbage, is now pushed through a maze of pipes just below the ground to three 1,300-horsepower engines, which generate electricity.

The engines will generate enough electricity every year to meet the annual needs of 1,900 homes. Alza, the pharmaceutical company that spearheaded the $11.2 million project, will use most of that energy at six of its large buildings on Charleston Road, with 10 percent being sold to PG&E for use elsewhere. The methane is expected to come out of the ground for at least 15 more years.

Government officials and corporate representatives extolled the virtues of turning the waste gas into energy at a ribbon-cutting ceremony Oct. 26 in the lobby of Alza's Mountain View headquarters.

"This is going to be a prime example for how things can work statewide," said state Assemblywoman Sally Lieber. She made jokes about how methane gas used to come out of the ground during Grateful Dead concerts at Shoreline Amphitheatre.

"Not only is it good for the environment, it's helping us as well," said Kevin Duggan, city manager. He meant financially: Last month the city received $130,000 for selling the methane gas to Alza. Duggan estimates that more than $1 million in revenues will be generated every year.

Alza was encouraged by the city to build the energy plant, and PG&E provided $2.9 million in incentives under its self-generation incentive program.

Alza spokesperson Liz Falcone said it wasn't common for a corporation to take on such a project. Only a few companies have, including General Motors, she said.

One Alza official said that it was the company's goal to reduce its carbon dioxide emissions by 7 percent. "We've done it in Mountain View," he said. "That's quite an accomplishment."

"When it comes to CO₂, less is more," said David Rubin, director of service analysis for PG&E. Rubin said the heat produced by the engines was being used to heat water for the buildings.

"They are making full use of every BTU of that gas," he said.

Alza estimates the new plant will prevent 17.3 million pounds of carbon dioxide from entering the atmosphere every year.

It will also keep methane out of the atmosphere which previously had seeped from the ground at Shoreline. Methane represents 9 percent of greenhouse gases emitted in the U.S., according to the National Energy Information Center, and according to the Environmental Protection Agency, "methane is over 20 times more effective in trapping heat in the atmosphere than carbon dioxide over a 100-year period."

Present at the ceremony were Mayor Nick Galiotto and council members Matt Pear and Tom Means. All three officials were on the technology committee when the project first got its wings. Galiotto said Alza was told "the

COMPANY'S BREAKTHROUGH IN FUEL CELL TECHNOLOGY LETS LAPTOPS, CELL PHONES RUN ON METHANOL

By Daniel DeBolt

Mountain View-based Polyfuel has developed a technology that they say will allow laptops and cell phones to run indefinitely on methanol, a renewable fuel that can be made from corn and other crops.

Polyfuel's breakthrough is a plastic membrane that at first glance looks like heavy-duty Saran Wrap. But the substance — which took years for the former Stanford Research Institute scientists to develop — converts methanol into electricity.

"There aren't many pieces of plastic that do that," said Jim Balcom, president and CEO of the 40-person company. "The membrane is the heart of the fuel cell."

While hydrogen fuel cell technology may be many years away for cars, methanol fuel cell technology for handheld electronics is apparently just around the corner — and may prove to be a catalyst for automotive use, Balcom said. Many major companies, such as NEC and Sanyo, are already using Polyfuel's

BNI HOSTS MIXER AT LOCAL CHEVY'S

On Thursday, Nov. 9, from 5:30-7:30 p.m., Business Network International, otherwise known as BNI, will hold a business mixer at Chevy's Restaurant in Mountain View.

BNI is a business referral organization composed of small business owners all throughout Silicon Valley. Each BNI club aims to have one representative from each profession.

The mixer will provide a place for small-business owners in the area to meet and create strong relationships, said BNI affiliate Ingrid Mult.

"We refer each other based on trust and good experiences. The event is a great way to get connected," Mult said.

Chevy's is located at 2116 W. El Camino Real. Visit www.siliconvalleybni.com for more details about the company and the event. The group also holds a breakfast at Chevy's every Thursday morning at 7 a.m.

membranes to develop their own fuel cells.

The technology isn't meant to make standard batteries obsolete, Balcom said. But for many handheld devices, especially as they become more powerful or use larger LCD screens, the desired run time simply won't be achieved without a fuel cell to accompany the battery, he said.

Researchers believe today's battery technology has nearly reached its peak. And there are hazards, with reports of some newer laptop batteries catching on fire.

Cell phones and laptops will likely be the first to use the technology, though there has been interest for various other devices, including cameras, electric scooters and security devices.

Balcom favors the idea of making the methanol fuel cell a cartridge that can be replaced, like a non-rechargeable battery. Another possibility would be to refill the device after the methanol is used up — similar to the pressurized refill canisters used for butane lighters. ■

MOUNTAIN VIEW STARTUP TURNS E-MAIL TO HARD COPY FOR THOSE WITHOUT ONLINE ACCESS

By Angela Hey

All by itself, the printer next to your phone whirs into action. Soon enough, you've got a hard copy of your e-mail—and you don't even own a computer.

Angela Hey

A Mountain View startup, Presto, is partnering with HP to create a service that sends pictures, e-mails, calendar pages and news to friends and relatives who aren't online. The service can also deliver news, recipes and health information. Only known senders can transmit messages to a recipient, avoiding the plague of junk mail.

According to a Pew Internet survey last April, whereas 88 percent of Americans between the ages of 18 and 29 go online, only 32 percent of those over 65 connect to the Internet. In households whose annual income is less than $30,000, only 53 percent of adults go online. So, hard as it may be to believe in Silicon Valley, there are still millions of people who can benefit from Presto's service.

Presto started in 2004 and, unlike many Silicon Valley startups that are engineering driven, spent its early life learning about customers. According to Sheila Salvucci, vice president of marketing, Presto spent "a few million to research the market and understand what consumers really want before creating the service."

The team comes from leading companies in consumer marketing, photo-sharing, mobile computing and Internet services. More importantly, it is backed with $10 million in venture funding from Kleiner Perkins and Clearstone Venture Partners.

HP has created a special printer for Presto's service, the Printing Mailbox. It sets up easily, requiring only one tri-color cartridge. The paper path is straighter than on many printers, reducing the possibility of a paper jam. It has a STOP button and volume controls, the latter to vary the loudness of an alert sound that indicates message arrival.

The Printing Mailbox polls the Presto service and is smart enough to disconnect if a phone call comes in. So there is no disruption to normal phone calls, as there would be with a fax machine. That's just one of the reasons you might be tempted to pay $99.99 for a year's service and $149 (plus tax and shipping) for HP's device.

Another reason is that it actually reformats an e-mail with pictures attached, laying out the pictures on a decorative page, like a greeting card. As higher quality cameras are integrated with PDAs and cell phones, this feature offers more value to the traveler, who can send illustrated messages to the Printing Mailbox while on the road.

I wonder if the service fee is sustainable, or if an advertising model will prevail eventually — or, for that matter, if a service is really needed. A software application on the sender's machine and a next-generation color fax machine could potentially do the job without the need for a fee-based service. And amongst the plethora of photo-sharing and photo-finishing sites — from vendors like Photobucket, Yahoo and Kodak — some must surely want to add simple services for reaching non-computer users.

Subscribers may well want to send a PDF file to an aging parent. Surely Presto can add a general purpose printer driver to its service. After all, remote printing is common in the business market.

My take is that the service at its launch, in November, will be highly functional for the specific tasks it is designed to perform, but somewhat limited for professional computer users. When third parties start to create enhanced services on Presto's platform, such as personal health reports, TV schedules, crossword of the day and prayer of the week, it could really start to take off.

You can order it in advance now on Presto's Web site, www.presto.com. ■ money isn't as important as burning as much of the methane as possible."

There are 350 energy plants in the country that run off of land-fill-generated methane gas. Scott Colpitts, director of engineering and maintenance for Alza, said the closest plants like it are probably in Monterey and Altamont.

A subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson, Alza makes pharmaceutical drug delivery technology, such as timed-release capsules. ■

Larry's Knows...

Brought to you by Larry & Laurie Moore

WHAT TO TAKE FOR THAT BURNING FEELING

If your engine is idling rough, it may be that you have a burned valve. This can be diagnosed with a compression test that measures the pressure in all cylinders. When the pressure gauge reads lower than normal, pressure is leaking out of the combustion chamber. A burned valve, which can no longer hold a leak-free seal due to overheating, is usually limited to exhaust valves because they run much hotter than intake valves. To repair a burned valve, it is necessary to remove the cylinder head, replace the bad valve, and reface/repair the valve seat. If one valve has failed, preventive maintenance and common sense usually dictate that they all be replaced while you are at it.

Proper diagnosis is critical for first-rate repair, and that's what we can provide. At AAA-approved Larry's Autoworks, we have years of experience in solving sticky service problems and finding efficient solutions. We are just off the 101 Freeway on Leghorn between San Antonio and Rengstorff in Mountain View. Take the Rengstorff exit south, then right on Leghorn. Every car our customers bring to us for service has a technician who is factory qualified and trained on that vehicle. Keep that in mind. There is a difference here and our customers know it.

HINT: A bad exhaust valve will also appreciably increase exhaust emissions because it allows unburned fuel to leak into the exhaust.

UGLY RUBBER SANDALS, ONCE A STAPLE OF BOATERS AND GARDENERS, ARE NOW JUMPING OFF THE SHELVES

By Molly Tanenbaum

they're audacious and clumsy and they look like Swiss cheese. But they're irresistible.

An early hit with gardeners, athletes, nurses and chefs because of their comfort, arch support and slip-on-ability, Crocs have become a new fashion staple.

Ask most wearers of the rubber sandal about their shoes and you'll think they're part of the Colorado company's marketing team.

Take Barbara Anderson, who, between sips of coffee with a friend at the Stanford Shopping Center, couldn't stop raving about the black Crocs that she picked up for a month-long trip to Eastern Europe.

"I had two other pairs of shoes with me that I thought I'd wear more, but I wore these 25 out of the 28 days of my trip," said Anderson, of San Jose, pointing at her feet.

She wore them with and without socks, for long days of hiking and sight seeing.

"Your foot kinda sinks into it. They don't slide or slip," she said. "The people I traveled with were tired of me talking about how great they are," she added.

With Crocs, as with Ugg boots, comfort has triumphed over looks. Unlike $100 Uggs or Dansko clogs, Crocs are relatively affordable at $30 for adults and $25 for kids. And there are plenty of colors to choose from for men and women. The standard "Cayman" style comes in a wide array of hues, from neon pink to army green.

However, because the wide-toed sandals — originally intended for boating in Boulder, Colo. — are down-esque, they were first worn like other unsightly shoes: as house slippers and gardening slip-ons.

That's all changed, says Donya Disperati, shoe sales manager at Nordstrom in the Stanford Shopping Center, where Crocs are big sellers.

"Now, it's more casual wear," she said.

When deciding on a new pair of shoes, buyers must determine their needs along the look-good/feel-good continuum. It's rare to find both extremes in one shoe, and Crocs are up there with other hideous-but-comfy shoes, like duck boots and aqua socks.

But even the trend-seekers are having trouble ignoring them.

At the Stanford Shopping Center last week, Thais Barrocas, 15, in Ugg boots and a miniskirt, said she was tempted to buy Crocs.

"They're ugly but they're comfortable," she said, adding that one of her friends already owns them in four different colors.

Crocs have become the most popular shoe at Paul's European Cobbler on California Avenue.

When a Crocs representative approached owner Jessica Roth about carrying the strange sandals at her family's shoe store, her initial reaction was: "Oh, no thank you. They're really kind of funny-looking."

But she soon changed her mind. Clad in brown Mary Jane Crocs last week, Roth said she's had them in stock for the past year and estimates she has sold about 600 pairs.

"Right now, if I put in an order, I won't get it until 16 to 18 weeks. That's unheard of in the shoe business."

What began as a shoe for adult outdoor enthusiasts has become a must-have for kids.

Barbara Salinger, of Menlo Park, has given her 3-year-old son, Danny, two pairs of Crocs — navy and khaki — because he wears them so much.

"He always requests wearing them," she said, adding that many of his friends also have them.

The initial attraction for curly-haired Danny, Salinger said, was the friendly cartoon crocodile on the shoe.

For her, Crocs' selling points have been their affordability, "the ease of a 3-year-old being able to put them appearance department. The company has expanded its line of shoes, adding the narrower, more feminine Mary Janes and "Prima" ballet flats. Roth says styles to come include high-heeled Crocs, Stanford Crocs and Disney Crocs.

Croc wearers can also accessorize their sandals with "Jibbitz," little $2 charms used to adorn the holed top of each Croc. Jibbitz charms come as ladybugs, skulls, flowers, jewels and other collectable shapes.

"We've had a customer buy 90 Jibbitz in one transaction," Disperati said.

During the chilly months, Crocs don't have to hide in the closet next to the flip-flops. Roth recommends slipping Crocs over a pair of furry fleece socks for extra warmth.

The company also sells enclosed rain boots, and is coming out with other cold-weather shoes.

So, move over, Uggs. Your time is up. ▣

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF: ELIZABETH MAY COSTA

1-06-PR-160200
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of ELIZABETH MAY COSTA.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by: GEORGE A. COSTA in the Superior Court of California, County of SANTA CLARA.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that GEORGE A. COSTA be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on November 22, 2006 at 9:00 a.m. in Dept. 15 of the Superior Court of California, Santa Clara County, located at 191 N. First St., San Jose, CA, 95113.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
Attorney for Petitioner:

"Professional, reliable, energetic, knowledgeable, and lots of fun- that's Elizabeth. We couldn't have asked for more! As first time homebuyers, we were nervous about the home buying process. Elizabeth made it easy and helped us get into our new home, hassle-free, within weeks of our initial contact with her. When we are ready to move into a bigger home and sell our current home, our first phone call will be to Elizabeth. Thank you!!"
