THEATREWORKS PREMIERS DAZZLING, QUICK-WITTED 'THEOPHILUS NORTH'

By Melody Dye

Oscar Wilde wrote that "in matters of grave importance, style, not sincerity, is the vital thing." TheatreWorks' production of "Theophilus North," now playing at the Lucie Stern Theater in Palo Alto, is a stylish bit of theater that comes off just as clever as it intends.

The play is set in Newport, Rhode Island in 1926 among the Gatsby-era rich. It follows the heady young Theophilus, a would-be writer struck with wanderlust and stuck in Newport, and makes a chronicle of his misbegotten triumphs and ruddy misadventures with the townspeople. There is, it seems, an unsettling divide between his cosmopolitan ambitions and the prosaic reality of his existence.

A tidy summary of the proceedings might be helpful at this point — but the play has very little in the way of a linear plot. What is essential to it is not so much what happens — in fact, very little happens — but rather what is said, what goes unsaid, and the delicate interplay of the characters. The story unfolds as a series of vignettes that fit neatly together, bound up by recurring metaphors, motifs and its ever-present protagonist.

Linear plot or no, the intellectual predilections of the play's author, esteemed American dramatist and novelist Thornton Wilder, and its adaptor, first-time playwright Matthew Burnett, are glaringly obvious: The characters quote Goethe, Henry James and Shakespeare in turn. But such lofty musings are tempered by a wry wit and the oft-employed ironic aside. What passes for highbrow, it turns out, is nearly always tongue-in-cheek.

What's fantastic about "Theophilus" is certainly not its philosophical allusions, nor its plot, nor the passably profound reflections of its title character. It's the clever dialogue, the jesting and jiving of the minor

Keeping it real

PAINTER MIKE WANG'S AMAZING REALISM COMES TO CENTER FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS

By Rebecca Wallace

"Tibetans"

The sun is breaking dramatically over snowy Tibetan peaks and a mountain lake, but the focal point of the painting "In Anticipation" is the face of a small boy.

Los Altos artist Ming Jing "Mike" Wang saw the boy during a trip to Tibet last year and was compelled to paint his scarlet robe and the olive branch he was holding. He also captured the subtle blend of emotions on the child's face.

"I saw a group of kids in a village ... the occasion was a family sending the boy off to a [Buddhist] monastery," Wang said. "Being a monk is a demanding job; you give up many desires to go into a monastery."

Wang pictured himself being compelled by his parents to join this life of prayer and study, and imagined he'd have a mix of emotions: eagerness, anxiety, and a sense that he was bringing honor to his family. The vivid oil painting is the result.

Wang's careful realism is a hallmark of his work. The details in his art — facial features and architecture, light and shadow — can give the oil paintings a sense of immediate reality hanging on a wall. He sometimes paints portraits on commission, but won't do it from photos; subjects must sit for him.

"With portraits these days, people want impressions, not long sittings and exact likenesses," Wang says in his living room studio, a quiet space with high ceilings and a creek in the backyard. "But I'm still a realist. I try to paint what I see."

Wang traces his artistic approach to China, where he grew up and lived until the mid-1980s, when he came to this country for medical training. He's now an anesthesiologist at Kaiser Permanente in Santa Clara, creating art in his spare time.

In China, Wang started painting in middle school but said he and other artists were hampered by societal restrictions. Teachers were not allowed to teach about "Western influences" such as Italian Renaissance artists, and students found their subject matter could be restricted, he said.

Because of these limitations, Wang and other artists had to concentrate on other aspects of their art. Many focused on realism skills, creating "tightly rendered paintings with close representation" of their subjects, Wang said.

Wang ultimately found a private art teacher to quietly work with him outside school. "Despite the reality, there's always a way around it," he said.

Wang came to the United States to do post-graduate work at the University of Kansas, and to the Bay Area about 10 years ago. He began taking art classes at the Pacific Art League in Palo Alto in his non-work time. Being an anesthesiologist allows him more regular hours than other types of doctors have, he said.

Wang has had paintings in several juried group shows in recent years, and currently has a solo exhibit at the Mountain View Center for the Performing Arts. "In Anticipation" is prominently displayed, with other images of realism — including portraits and scenes in Tibet — abounding.

A rare exception is "Telegraph Hill," a San Francisco vista dominated by heavy fog. Here, thick dabs of paint are less precise, giving the painting a faraway, Impressionist feel. It's as though the city is sleeping under the gray sky.

In the many paintings from Tibet on exhibit, Wang often explores how traditional culture is impacted by "modern intrusions." The theme is perhaps most evident in "Tibetans," in which a woman in a pink head scarf and burly coat carries a child on her back — along with a can of Coke.

Wang had a longtime fascination with Tibet before going there last year. He had learned in China about the country and its dedication to Buddhism, and pictured it as a place of mystics, with much poverty but also devotion.

"In the past decade I kept hearing reports that Tibet is being ruined by modern society: highways, buildings. I wanted to go and have a look myself," he said.

In his home, he flips through a sketchbook with his brushed-ink impressions of Lhasa. A street vendor and a monk pass by, followed by a man in a business suit. Plenty of Western travelers were there as well, many to climb mountains.

The mountains make many appearances in the exhibited paintings, including a self-portrait called "Oxygen!" Here, Wang is shown in front of massive cliffs, holding a hospital mask and wearing scrubs.

It was that painting along with another self-portrait that first impressed Palo Alto painter Kenney Mencher, a professor in Ohlone College's department of art and art history. Last year, he and Wang both took part in a show of self-portraits at the Triton Museum of Art in Santa Clara.

"I thought that these two works by Mike were some of the best paintings in the show," Mencher said. "Several months later I came across his work at the Pacific Art League and in each instance of seeing his work, I got that little shiver I get when I see a painter who does the things I love to see."

Mencher added: "The light, color, anatomy and paint handling were extraordinary to me and really held up under closer inspection. I also felt that these two portraits in the Triton show were more than that. They also showed that he had a mastery over some of the hard stuff to paint like drapery, still life and landscape painting."

Mencher said it can be difficult for realist painters like Wang to break into the gallery world; some gallery owners find straightforward realism too illustrative, without an edge. And yet Mencher says that "one of the best galleries in San Francisco," the John Pence Gallery, expressly seeks out realist artists.

Wang says he'd like to find a gallery to represent him, and mentions a solo gallery show as one of his goals. Still, he seems happy balancing art with medicine. Free from the restrictions of his student days, he paints whatever he wants, whenever he wants, and he doesn't have to worry about making a living at it.

"Once I have the idea, it goes quickly," he says contentedly. "I can do a painting in a week." ■ players, the understatement, the asides, the subtle gestures, the spot-on accents, the stop-action sequences, the scene setting and, finally, the mood lighting.

There's something technically brilliant about the production, and the immediate effect is hilarity — a stylish sort of hilarity. The audience laughed and applauded throughout, and some were even heard to gasp, "How clever!"

"Jig-o-lo," says Mrs. Cranton, smirking, "that's French for dancing partner with ambition!"

But the play isn't simply funny, it's also beautifully executed.

The acting is phenomenal, with the six players from the supporting cast in costume as the sexually repressed teenager, the eccentric shut-in, the acid-tongued wife, her philandering husband, the dreamy innocent, the unflappable servant and quite a number of others. While some of the roles come off as caricature, often of the comic variety, the complexity of conversations and relations never diminishes.

There's also much to be said for the setting. Michael Palumbo's lighting design is elegant and suggestive, his fluidly shifting backdrops giving color to the players' moods.

The play's first scene opens with a backdrop awash in blues and a singed sort of orange. Sunset turns to dusk, and the long silhouette of a single bough snakes across the screen, its branches evoking the stark brushstrokes of a Japanese print. As the play advances, shadows ebb and flow along with it, the backlights blurring like watercolors as the actors make lines in the foreground.

Then there's the set itself, which is strikingly simple. It's classic

PENINSULAIRES OFFER FREE VOCAL LESSONS

This August, the Peninsulaires Men's Barbershop Chorus is offering free weekly vocal lessons for men.

Every Tuesday evening, Paul Eastman, the vice president of music and performance for the group, will conduct a series of free educational sessions that focus on improving vocal quality.

Community members are welcome to attend any or all of the lessons. As part of these sessions, participants will sing with the Peninsulaires during their rehearsal, putting their new skills to immediate use.

The venue is First United Methodist Church of Sunnyvale at 550 Old San Francisco Road, just West of Fair Oaks, in Sunnyvale. Rehearsal begins at 7:30 p.m. The upcoming topics are: Aug. 7, chord vocabulary; Aug.

LOCAL ARTIST'S WORK AT TRITON MUSEUM

Local resident Robert Schick currently has five paintings exhibited in the Triton Museum showing of "Landscapes: Rural and Urban Realities."

The show features some 150 works filling all three of the Santa Clara museum's galleries. Schick's paintings are all of landmarks in Mountain View or nearby: The Farm Fresh Stand with pumpkins; the Satake Nursery; the Echo of Los Altos; Sunnyvale's Olson Orchard; and Chuck's Produce Stand.

The show started its run in early July and closes Sept. 30. A reception to meet the artists will be held Friday, Aug. 3, 7-9 p.m. Admission is free. For more information, visit www.tritonmuseum.org or contact the museum at (408) 247-3754.

most of their set, describing in lilted turn the scenes they inhabit; mimicking in jest the props they haven't got — in one instance, a Model-T Ford. It's a gimmick, but it focuses the spotlight on the acting and the dialogue, where it belongs. Near the end of the second act, Theophilus muses that life in a small town is "variously beautiful, absurd, impressive, commonplace..." The same words might just as aptly describe his play. ▀

Rengstorff House Arts Festival back for 7th year

By Melody Dye

The Rengstorff House August Arts Festival once again celebrates the artistic legacy of Mountain View's pioneering Rengstorff family, featuring live performances and the works of local artists throughout the month. All events are free and open to the public, with a suggested donation of $10.

The fine arts show will run Aug. 1-31 and will be open to the public on Sundays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. The show includes watercolors by Jackie Krantz, Patricia Nojima, Victor Burkman and Tom Raffin; oils by Robert Schick; sculpture by Margarita Soyfertis and Gina Holmberg; photography by Walt Rau; and the eclectic works of Jacqueline Ernst.

Watercolors by students from the Community School of Music and Arts' "Arts in Action" program will also be showcased. A reception for the artists will be held on Thursday, Aug. 2, 5-7 p.m. inside the Rengstorff House.

On Sunday afternoons, free performances will be presented in the gardens of Reng-storff House, which is located next to the golf course at Shoreline in Mountain View. Those start Aug. 5 with Woman's Will, the all-female Berkeley-based Shakespeare troupe, returning with their production of "Romeo and Juliet."

On Aug. 12, the gardens will play host to the classical flute and guitar music of Brian Bensin and Adam Roszkiewicz. Aug. 19 will feature Wendy Waller and Her Fine Band playing New Orleans jazz. The series will conclude on Aug. 26 with the CSMA Faculty Brass Quintet presenting its musical journey, "Mahler to Waller."

CRESCENT PARK CUL-DE-SAC COMPLETELY REMODELED

This beautiful home on a Crescent Park cul-de-sac feels brand new after a down to the studs revovation and expansion 2 years ago.

Built with care and craftsmanship, this stunning 3 bedroom and 2 bath home of over 2000 sq. feet (per blueprints) has a multitude of amenities including:

- ∞ The spacious great room that is ideal for entertaining and relaxing. Light and bright, this room is infused with light from 6 skylights and two sets of Anderson French doors. Vaulted ceilings and many built-ins add to the sense of openness.
- ∞ The chef's kitchen features granite countertops and maple cabinetry with glass enclosures. High-end appliances include a Sub-Zero refrigerator, Wolf 6 burner range, Miele Dishwasher & GE Profile trash compactor. A wood butcher block island is bathed in light from 4 skylights in the vaulted ceiling.
- ∞ The master bedroom suite is a luxurious retreat featuring limestone counters and floors in the Master Bath. The dual limestone shower has a glass ceiling and is flooded with light. The bedroom has French doors leading to the private backyard.
- ∞ The guest bathroom has marble countertops, antique subway tiles and designer stone floors.
- ∞ Throughout the home are Brazilian cherry hardwood floors except for the bedrooms, which have wool carpet.
- ∞ Crown moldings and baseboards featured throughout the home.
- ∞ Countless other amenities include Cat 5 wiring, central sound system with speakers in the ceiling, built-in water purification system, and much more.
- ∞ Included in the renovation 2 years ago were new roof, water heater, radiant heating system and Anderson windows and French doors.
- ∞ Great Palo Alto Schools include Duvneck Elementary, Jordan Middle, and Palo Alto High (buyer to verify enrollment availability).
