ART UNDER THE DOME

Local students share their own stories in City Hall exhibit

By Casey Weiss

As part of his art assignment, Ray Nelson, a third grader at Bubb Elementary School, had only yellow, black and white permanent markers and a blank sheet of paper to create a portrait of his classmate.

Nelson mostly forgot about color, paying special attention instead to the size and shape of Gaku's hands and the lines in his eyes while drawing his portrait, which is now hanging in the Mountain View City Hall rotunda with about 200 other student projects.

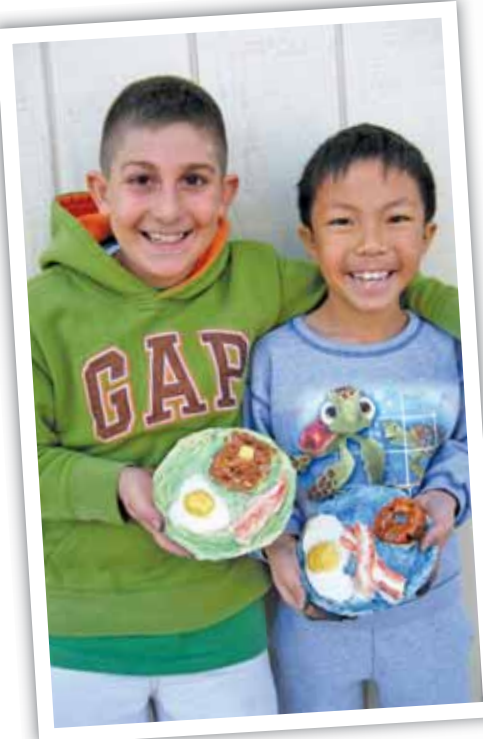

The artwork is part of a Community School of Music and Arts collaboration, titled "Tell Me a Story," in which students from 15 local elementary and middle schools were asked to capture a story in their artwork. The final exhibition includes collages, paintings, sculptures and drawings, all on display at City Hall until March 27.

BEAT-BOXING CELLO PLAYER 'CELLO JOE' CHANG
IS ON THE PATH OF DISCOVERY — AND HE'S HEADED YOUR WAY

By Ashley Ramirez

He's no ordinary Joe. Indeed, 28-year-old Joseph "Cello Joe" Chang is an original Joe who sings and beat-boxes while playing the cello.

He's also just generally wacky. As he pulled out a few zucchinis and a bag of shredded lettuce from his backpack, the song "Veggie Maniac," which he had performed minutes before, suddenly became a reality.

Chang's lyrics claim his passionate love for such vegetables as broccoli and kale. (He has also worked at organic farms.) As he snacked between words, he admitted to sometimes hanging out and people-watching at farmers markets.

"I'm really into rare vegetables," he said assertively. "I don't care if people think I'm crazy. I like gibberish and being silly." His original brand of silliness is coming to Dana Street Roasting Co. next Friday, March 27.

Chang, a Los Altos native who calls traveling to gigs his home and music his full-time job, packs his songs with humor and satirical lyrics. Although he grew up playing classical music, he now describes his style as funky folk with a little hip-hop, punk and dance.

It was in the fifth grade that Chang encountered the cello. The school had a room full of instruments and the kids tried each one out; the cello caught his attention. From that moment on it was years of private lessons, music camps and youth orchestras.

"I liked the cello the most. There are hardly any cellists in an orchestra," he said.

Eventually, he toured with Palo Alto's El Camino Youth Symphony, taking two trips to Europe. He also was awarded a scholarship to attend Berklee College of Music in Boston from 2002-06.

When he was 18, Chang discovered performing for the public. He found himself regularly on street corners of University Avenue in Palo Alto. With his case open for change and cello in hand, he would put on a show playing traditional classical tunes for the local shoppers, residents, anyone who would listen. But it wasn't the desired outcome.

"I wanted to perform in front of an audience, but that got old. People weren't really listening to me," he said.

Ultimately, Chang's love for hip-hop came into play. He met a man named Steve Foxx the Beat Box at Berklee, who gave him pointers on how to master the not-so-common form of beat-boxing. Chang describes beat-boxing as vocal percussion, and imitating a drum set with your mouth.

Joe Chang, aka "Cello Joe", combines his classical training with hip hop beats and a socially conscious message.

He practiced everywhere, from walking down the street to standing in line at the supermarket. The good thing about it, he said, is that there are no limitations on when and where you can do it.

Chang began to improvise — "freestyle," he calls it — while he played. Mixing beats and melodies both vocally and through instruments, he improvised lyrics using his interests and location to motivate him. He says he started singing songs to wake people up and turn them on to life. His topics include social and earth justice, consumerism and simply being happy.

"I sing about how we can progress [toward] a sustainable future," he said firmly. "There's so many ways you can help out in the world. I use music as a way to convey that message."

Chang's band, Cello Joe and the Midnight Ramblers, often plays at local gigs, venues and festivals. The band typically consists of a rotating cast of musicians with Chang as the sole regular member. He says the easiest thing about playing folk-type music is that any good musician can sit in on the simple songs.

"I'm a rhythm kind of guy. I like to be creative. I never do a song the same way twice," he said.

Naturally, the band consists of many musical instruments, including banjos, fiddles and violins. Chang also performs a jaw harp, slide whistle and rhythm bones.

Drummer and band mate Evan Bautista has played approximately 100 shows with Chang, he said.

Jamming with each other over the last two years, they're formed a friendship and can call on each other when needed. Bautista also has another band that Chang helps out with, and they back each other up playing gigs.

"He's very unique and a wild one at times," Bautista said, describing Chang's performances. "He's very classically trained, with his own twists."

Chang recently rode in a 5,000-mile bike tour called The Pleasant Revolution with the band Ginger Ninjas. They set off from Northern California and traveled — with a bike trailer for his cello — all the way to Mexico. They would pull up into a town and talk to people at different bars trying to find a gig. As far as he knows, he's the world's only long-distance bike-touring cellist.

Nothing seems to slow Chang down. He has a dream of one day producing a musical theater puppet show that he says is slowly coming true. He plans to include live music and improvisation with the audience.

"I want to make it funny and interactive, like having a puppet hit on someone in the audience," he said, laughing. "If I dream this and want it, my subconscious will activate it and make it happen." ▣

"Students drew inspiration from children's literature and used their imagination and personal experiences to create their own stories," CSMA's visual arts director Linda Covello said in a press release.

Through her portrait assignment, teacher Mira Ross hoped Nelson and his peers would get to know their subjects better. They were asked to write facts about the subjects around the border of the paintings, and Nelson wrote "Gaku likes to paint" on his.

A reason for the assignment, Ross wrote, was that "After three months of school, students in the same classroom ... knew little about each other."

This is the 12th year students have displayed their art in a collaborative project through CSMA. The Mountain View nonprofit serves more than 7,000 students each year through art and music classes, and its instructors travel weekly to local schools.

Students from Bubb, Castro, Huff, Landels, Monta Loma, Theuerkauf and Yew Chung Chinese schools in Mountain View all currently have art hanging in City Hall.

Instructors also created their own pieces, and Covello said a lot of the projects were inspired by the teachers' own specialties. Because of this, the exhibits vary widely from class to class.

Behind the portraits, Castro first graders displayed the books they painted based on nursery rhymes read in class.

Tracy Ogino illustrated a rhyme called "Little Tommy Mouse," about fishing. She drew the fisherman and his house on the cover, and included a garden with her favorite vegetables.

"The man who owned the house has a garden with flowers and carrots," she said. ▣

Good to be blue

THEATREWORKS' 'IT AIN'T NOTHIN' BUT THE BLUES' BRINGS THE HOUSE DOWN

By Jeanie Forte

The blues can be slow and sultry, or driving with a funky beat, or sad and lonesome, or one of many other forms this uniquely American music has taken over the last couple of centuries.

The current offering from TheatreWorks now playing at the Lucie Stern, "It Ain't Nothin' but the Blues," covers the entire gamut of blues styles and types with great energy and verve, rousing the audience to its feet by the end. Three women and four men and a fabulous band bring it all home with tunes both familiar and not in a show that definitely does not give you the blues.

This rich collection of more than 40 musical numbers — ranging from African slave chants to Delta blues to Chicago funk to Nashville ballads and more — is really a cleverly disguised history lesson, framing each number in its historical context with minimal narrative and evocative photo projections on large on-stage screens. The images capture blues pioneers, such as the great Robert Johnson, Bessie Smith or Ma Rainey, but also depict the ordinary people of American experience: an immigrant family, sharecroppers, men on a chain gang, children of all colors, nightclubs, clapboard churches.

All on a walk through decades of the incredible roil of culture, the essence of which lives on in the heartfelt music.

Ron Taylor came up with the idea, and co-wrote the show with Randal Myler, Lita Gaithers, "Mississippi" Charles Bevel and Dan Wheatman. Taylor died in 2001, but had lived to see the show blossom from a children's show into a full-length Tony-winning Broadway hit. Many of the original authors have performed in the show, or continued to be involved with it; in this production, Myler directs as he has from the first, Wheel-man helmed music direction, and Bevel performs with the ensemble. Another longtime participant, Chic Street Man, has traveled to be in this run. Chic and "Sip" are national treasures, terrific performers with charisma and character and an enormous knowledge of their field, often bringing a humorous note into the show.

are expert banjo and guitar player Tony Marcus, who delivers bluegrass and other "white" music, revealing its close lineage with the blues; and local favorite James Monroe Iglehart, whose velvet voice gets to play a little wild here with some great standards such as "The Thrill is Gone" and "Hoochie Coochie Man."

The women are equally strong, including C. Kelly Wright, another popular local performer whose voice can go from a tender caress to the power of raw emotion. She also demonstrates her knack for comedy in numbers such as "Someone Else is Steppin' In." Michelle Jordan blew us all away in "Crowns," and here again wows us with her ability to interpret absolutely anything. Her solo turn on "Strange Fruit" is a tour de force not to be missed. Alison Ewing has also graced local stages, using her beautiful Broadway sound to excellent effect on numbers such as "Walking After Midnight" and "Fever." ▣

UP NEXT: THEATREWORKS PRESENTS 'DISTRACTED'

TheatreWorks' final show of the season, "Distracted," comes to the Mountain View Center for the Performing Arts in early April.

"Distracted" is a comedic drama about a tired mother and her easily distracted, high-energy son who has been diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder.

The first preview is Wednesday, April 1, and the final show is April 26. Child psychologist Janet Dafoe, Ph.D., founder of the ADHD School Success Center in Palo Alto, will hold a discussion on ADD before the April 2 show at 6:30 p.m. Post-show discussions with the artistic staff and cast will be held after the April 8, 15 and 22 shows.

We're here to Help – When you or a loved one is diagnosed with breast cancer, Breast Cancer Connections is here for you.

Breast Cancer Connections (BCC) is committed to its mission to provide personalized information and support to people touched by breast cancer in an atmosphere of warmth, sensitivity, and understanding. Our clients and their families and friends benefit from high quality medical information services, a comprehensive Breast Health Library, Helpline (walk in and telephone support), weekly Question and Answer Open Houses with a physician and therapist, a Buddy Program which matches current clients with breast cancer survivors, a support group for individuals with Metastatic Breast Cancer, a Couples Support Group, a support group for those with DCIS, a team of therapists available for crisis counseling, writing and imagery workshops, assistance from our Health Educator to prepare for medical appointments, informational newsletters, and volunteer opportunities for breast cancer survivors and friends. We also have programs especially designed for younger women and programs for those who are post-treatment and seeking renewal and recovery.

All of BCC's services are free of charge, customized to an individual's needs, and can range from personalized research on a topic of interest to a conversation with a "Buddy", who has had a similar experience. Each client receives services personalized to their needs.

In addition to providing services for those diagnosed with breast cancer and their loved ones, BCC reaches out to underserved women through its Gabriella Patser Program which offers access to and payment for high quality screening and diagnostic services for low income, uninsured women under age 40, who are experiencing breast health problems. In an effort to overcome barriers to breast screening for many women, this program provides bilingual and bicultural staff, volunteers, and medical care providers. Participants in the program can further benefit from breast health education, including the importance of early detection, through our information packets, which are available in English, Spanish, and Vietnamese. Jill Freidenrich, a breast cancer patient and her surgeon, Dr. Ellen Mahoney, founded BCC as The Community Breast Health Project in 1993 after interviewing over 250 breast cancer survivors, family members, and medical professionals to outline the unmet needs of breast cancer patients and their families.

Today, as Breast Cancer Connections, this community organization continues to provide a unique set of services, working collaboratively with over 45 health organizations, community clinics, doctors and referral partners to connect clients with multiple resources in the community. Generous donations from individuals, corporations and foundations allow BCC to offer these much needed services.

If you are a breast cancer patient, or a person with breast cancer concerns, or someone who would like to volunteer to help others, BCC is an understanding and informative resource for you. Please call our helpline, visit us on Cambridge Avenue, or visit us on our website; www.bccconnections.org.

"I am so glad to have had BCC resources this past year, as I learned and dealt with my breast cancer. You have been an indispensable part of my recovery."

500 Help Wanted

Palo Alto Weekly seeks Education/Youth/Family beat reporter

The CNPA-award-winning, independent Palo Alto Weekly is seeking a reporter for its challenging Education, Youth and Family beat and community reporting. Applicants must be self-starters with an easy flow of story ideas, good analytical skills and an ability to develop a solid understanding of the complex local and statewide education system, challenges and trends.

The Weekly pioneered online posting of news stories as early as 1994, and is immersed in the fast-changing interface between print and online journalism. Applicants should have an interest in and excitement for the many possibilities in this area — including use of video and digital photography.

The job requires several stories a week, including daily news briefs posted to the Weekly's website, in-depth news stories and a cover story every four to six weeks relating to children, schools or families or other assignments in the community.

Candidates should have at least two years beat-coverage experience, preferably in education, have strong writing and grammar skills and be versatile in covering different types of education and community stories. Dependability and a desire to maintain collegial relationships with editors are essential.

It is strongly preferred that applicants live in or near Palo Alto. Out-of-state applicants with no roots in the area are discouraged. Send resume and three writing clips to Editorial Assistant Karla Kane, Palo Alto Weekly, 703 High Street, Palo Alto, CA, 94302, or e-mail kkane@pawebly.com. No phone calls please.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF:

WAYNE GAN TOM, aka WAYNE TOM, aka WAYNE G. TOM
Case No. 1-09-PR-164636
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of WAYNE GAN TOM, WAYNE TOM, WAYNE G. TOM.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by: ROSALIE T. FOX in the Superior Court of California, County of SANTA CLARA.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that ROSALIE T. FOX be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held on APRIL 8, 2009 at 9:00 a.m. in Dept. 15 of the Superior Court of California, Santa Clara County, located at 191 N. First St., San Jose, CA, 95113. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above. YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF:

EDWIN V. KARBOWSKI
Case No. 1-08-PR-164132
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of EDWIN V. KARBOWSKI.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by: JOHN M. KARBOWSKI in the Superior Court of California, County of SANTA CLARA.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that JOHN M. KARBOWSKI be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act.
