Big changes this school year

KAHN ACADEMY,
NEW GRADING POLICY,
MORE STUDENTS

By Nick Veronin

As students at Mountain View and Los Altos high schools were busy adjusting to their new class schedules and evaluating each others' back-to-school outfits, their teachers were preoccupied with adjustments and evaluations of another kind.

Monday, Aug. 13, was the first day of the new school year in the Mountain View-Los Altos Union High School District. And along with the new teachers, more students and many new courses, the day also marked the start of a brand new grading policy — a retooled system for assessing student performance that district administrators said is nothing short of revolutionary.

Grading policy

“There are very few districts, if any, that have a put a policy like this in place,” said Brigitte Sarraf, associate superintendent of educational services for the district. In all the meetings she has had with other high school district administrators throughout the state, she said she has never come across a grading policy as “progressive” as the one her district has adopted.

A new MVLA board policy, approved late last school year, dictates that a student's letter grade must solely reflect his or her mastery of the academic material and not take into account behavior, attendance or work habits. The new policy also requires that all classes taught within a given department are taught in a similar fashion, so that no student feels that he or she has the “easier” — or “harder” — teacher.

The policy follows the recommendations made by the Assessment Task Force, a group composed of district administrators, teachers, parents and students, which spent a year considering how MVLA's grading policies could be improved. The task force interviewed students, parents and teachers while working on its official list of recommendations, which were delivered to the district's board of trustees in April. “Students have the right to receive course grades that represent an accurate assessment of a student's achievement of content and performance standards.”

Six qualify to run for City Council

Emily Efland

Two incumbent City Council members and four newcomers will compete for four seats on the Mountain View City Council this November, as the city clerk confirmed that all six filed their candidate nomination papers and were qualified as of Friday's 5 p.m. filing deadline.

Apart from incumbents John Inks and Mike Kasperzak, four other candidates are vying for a spot on the council. Chris Clark and John McAlister, who both served on the Environmental Planning Commission, ran for seats in the previous election but did not win. Also facing off are Margaret Capriles, a data quality consultant who worked for Hewlett-Packard, and IT administrator Jim Neal.

A seventh potential candidate, Paul Sanders, Jr., pulled nomination papers last week but did not file them by the Friday, Aug. 10, deadline.

All six candidates said they will agree to the city's voluntary campaign expenditure limit of $21,388 this year.

Incumbents Laura Macias and Tom Means are finishing their second, four-year terms on the council and are not eligible to run again, due to term limits. ▣

A long road to Olympic gold, says water polo coach

By Nick Veronin

In his scramble to take in every bit of the gold medal ceremony at the London Olympics, Gary Krikorian missed witnessing a touching scene — all the players on the U.S. women's water polo team took off their medals and, one by one, hung them around his son's neck.

He said he and his wife would have liked to see the gesture made by the women on the team, but if they had, “we would have melted into tears.”

Krikorian's son, Adam, is the team's coach. The Mountain View native, who now lives in Southern California, led the team to win its first-ever Olympic gold medal at the London games.

Reached by phone after returning from London, the coach called the moment “one of the greatest of my coaching career.”

Adam Krikorian said that it had been a long 3 1/2 years since he began coaching the U.S. women's team.

“I don't think anyone — unless you're in it, and you're part of a team — I don't think anyone has any idea of the adversity that our team

■ COMMUNITY BRIEFS

HOSPITAL DISTRICT CANDIDATES

Three newcomers and two incumbents are running for three seats on the board of directors of the El Camino Hospital District.

Dennis W. Chiu, Bill James and Julia E. Miller have all filed their candidacy papers with the Santa Clara County Registrar of Voters, challenging incumbents Wesley F. Alles and John L. Zoglin, who are seeking reelection. Non-incumbent Catherine Vonnegut had pulled nomination papers, but ultimately decided not to run.

Miller is the latest of the candidates to throw her hat into the ring. She is a former administrator at Lockheed Martin, has served as mayor and city councilwoman for the City of Sunnyvale, and serves as a board member on the San Francisco Bay Trail and works for Sustainable Silicon Valley.

She said she is concerned with issues that were raised by two recent reports, issued by the Santa Clara County Civil Grand Jury and the Local Agency Formation Commission. And, she noted, both of the incumbents were not elected but appointed. "I think the public gets to choose," she said.

Chiu is a lawyer and the owner of the Sunnyvale-based firm, Prodigy Law. He said he is running because he believes the hospital has strayed from its original purpose and he wants to get it back on track.

James is a patent lawyer and partner at Van Pelt, Yi & James LLP, an intellectual property law firm based in Cupertino.

He ran for the hospital district board 2002. According to James, one of his biggest concerns is transparency. He believes too many decisions are made behind closed doors at El Camino.

Alles was first appointed to the board in 2003 and is seeking his third term on the hospital district's governing body. Zoglin, senior director of digital marketing services at the IBM-owned Coremetrics, is the board's current chairman. Both incumbents said that their experience on the board makes them the best choices for this election.

SCHOOL DISTRICT CANDIDATES

The Mountain View Whisman School District will be holding its first contested election in eight years this November, with at least four newcomers and no incumbents planning to run for three open seats on the district's board of trustees this November.

Incumbents Fiona Walter, Ed Bailey and Steve Olson all said they would not seek reelection.

Peter Darrah, Bill Lambert, Steve Nelson and Jim Pollart have all said they intend to run for one of the seats to be vacated by trustees whose terms expire this fall.

Another potential candidate, Priscila Bogdanic, pulled nomination papers and said she would run, but as of the afternoon of Aug. 15, the final day of the filing period, she had not submitted those

WALDORF SCHOOL'S GARDEN TEACHES, FEEDS THE HUNGRY

By Emily Efland

Clearly, many middle school and high school students at the Waldorf School of the Peninsula aren't dreading returning to school. A number of them have been working all summer with Waldorf's gardening teacher in the school's gardens.

The students' hard work culminated last week in the donation of their first harvest to the St. Vincent de Paul food bank. Students, teachers and parents on Aug. 6 picked the ripe fruit and vegetables for the food bank, which provides produce and other food for those in need every Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Gardening teacher Anastasia Sinclair says the private school donated vegetables such as tatsoi, chard, kale, beets and cucumbers in its first harvest. While the winter months may provide less food, Waldorf School officials intend to operate its garden year-round, Sinclair says.

Waldorf has a tradition of teaching its stu-

Bee enthusiast upset over hive's removal

CITY OFFICIALS SAY INSECTS WERE RELOCATED UNHARMED

By Nick Veronin

One Mountain View resident is upset that a beehive was removed from a tree on the 700 block of Independence Avenue.

The bees were removed from a hollow portion of the tree by a company that specializes in relocating hives and swarms of the honey-producing insects, as well as wasps and hornets, according to Bruce Hurlburt, parks and open space manager for the city.

"The bees are not killed," Hurlburt said. The company, Bee Friendly, uses a special vacuum and trained handlers to gather up the bees, pieces of constructed hive and the queen bee. The colony is relocated, either to a beekeeper or to an open space outside the city, where the bees pretty much get right back to what they were doing before.

"We're not out trying to hurt bees," he continued. "The only time we call a service is when it's an issue in a park or a street."

One woman who lives very near the former hive said she was glad that the hive was gone.

Monta Loma neighborhood resident Janet Kenney, who lives further away, sees things differently. "The city may think that they were doing something good, but I think that with colony collapse and everything that's going on right now, it's a travesty," Kenney said.

Kenney first emailed the Voice

More kids, new tech at MV Whisman

DISTRICT HAS 40 NEW TEACHERS THIS SCHOOL YEAR

By Nick Veronin

When Mountain View's elementary and middle school students start school on Monday, Aug. 20, they may notice some new faces, both at the desks around them and at the head of the class, as enrollment has grown and faculty has been increased throughout the district.

Craig Goldman, superintendent of the Mountain View Whisman School District, said about 125 more students are enrolled this year than in the previous year and that 40 new teachers have been brought on — both to handle the influx of kids and to replace retirees.

There are new administrators as well, Goldman said. Three schools have new principals, one has a new assistant principal, and the district's main office has a few newcomers. These new top officials represent a mixture of outside and inside hires.

Many students will be given access to new learning tools, such as tablet computers running online tutorial programs like the locally based Khan Academy and a math software suite called ST Math, which uses symbols, shapes and spatial techniques to teach math without using language.

The district is doing well financially.

SUPERINTENDENT
CRAIG GOLDMAN

"It's fantastic, particularly for low-income kids, and kids who are English learners," Goldman said of ST Math.

For many students, this marks the second full year of learning under the Explicit Direct Instruction system. The expansion and solidification of EDI, as well as the introduction of more in-class technology, has been made possible in large part by Google, Goldman said. "We're extremely pleased that Google has approved a second year of grant funding to support mathematics achievement for socioeconomically disadvantaged students."

'Not guilty' plea in LEGO-theft case

By Sue Dremann

A Palo Alto software company executive accused of switching barcodes on the tags of LEGO toys at a Mountain View store rejected a plea bargain and pleaded not guilty in Santa Clara County Superior Court in Palo Alto on Tuesday morning, Aug. 14.

Mountain View police arrested Thomas Langenbach, 47, the vice president of Palo Alto software firm SAP Labs, LLC, on May 8. He was charged with four felony-burglary counts for allegedly pasting fraudulent barcodes on LEGO toys at local Target stores. Loss-prevention officers at the Mountain View Target, located at 555 Showers Dr., detained him when he purchased a LEGO set that he allegedly labeled with a fraudulent barcode.

Thomas Langenbach

Langenbach had allegedly been "ticket switching" LEGO boxes since April 20 at the Target stores in Mountain View, Cupertino and near his San Carlos home, according to Mountain View police. He purchased the items at greatly lowered prices scanned from the barcodes, according to a criminal complaint by the Santa Clara County District Attorney's office.

Cops nab suspect in burglary of Steve Jobs' house

By Gennady Sheyner

The home of the late Steve Jobs, Apple's iconic co-founder, became one of Palo Alto's latest burglary targets last month when a man allegedly made off with at least two Apple computers, an iPad and a host of other electronic equipment and jewelry from the Waverley Street residence, according to the Santa Clara County District Attorney's Office.

Police believe the burglary occurred between the evening of July 17 and the morning of July 18 at Jobs' home in Old Palo Alto. The home is currently undergoing renovation, including roof work, and authorities believe no one was home at the time of the incident. The incident was reported on July 20, according to the Palo Alto Police Department report log.

Santa Clara County Supervising Deputy District Attorney Scott Tsui said the suspect is Kariem McFarlin, 35, of Alameda. McFarlin was arrested after Palo Alto officers and investigators from the regional Rapid Enforcement Allied Computer Team (REACT) Task Force used data obtained from Apple and AT&T to track the stolen computers, which were connecting to the Internet and Apple servers from McFarlin's home in Alameda, according to a report from REACT investigator Marshall Norton.

According to the report, McFarlin — a former San Jose State University cornerback — had admitted to burglarizing the Jobs residence and to being involved in several other burglaries of private residences in San Francisco.

BEE HIVE

when she discovered that the hive had been covered by "tar, wire mesh and silicon sealer." She presumed that a neighbor had simply covered the hive with the bees still inside — an incredibly inhumane thing to do, by her estimation. Even after hearing that the city had contracted with Bee Friendly and that the queen was reportedly removed unharmed, she was still upset. "I'm really disappointed that the city of Mountain View would do that."

Al Edrisi, regional manager of the Northern California division of Bee Friendly Bee Removal, said he would be equally upset if he learned that someone had killed a hive of bees. However, he continued, that's not the case here.

Bee Friendly, Edrisi noted, does not even offer a bee extermination service. It will only do bee relocation. He said it was "unfortunate" that many companies will kill bees — and even wasps and hornets — instead of working with a company like Bee Friendly, to get hives and swarms removed humanely.

"You would think that most companies would do live removals. But it seems that most companies, unfortunately, end up killing them. It's quite mind-blowing," he said.

Both Edrisi and Kenney said a big part of their concern for bees is that the fuzzy insects are responsible for the majority of pollination on the planet. "Without the existence of bees, scientists say, the earth could only survive another two or three years," Edrisi said. "Over a third of our food source comes from bees."

Kenney said she would have preferred it if the city had approached the situation differently. When she called to ask about the hive, she said she was told the bees were removed so that the tree where they had built their hive could be trimmed without the workers being stung. If that's the case, Kenney said, the city simply could have temporarily covered up the hive while trimming.

Hurlburt said the hive was removed because the bees were crossing a sidewalk frequently and posed a threat to passersby who could be allergic. If that were not the case, he said, the city would have not called Bee Friendly.

Kenney isn't buying it. She said that she has a beehive in her backyard and that it has never been a problem for her children or pets. "I just think that it was an over-reaction on someone's part." ▣

Former St. Francis student killed in action

Services are set for Saturday, Aug. 18, for the son of a Santa Clara County Superior Court judge who was killed in Afghanistan on Friday, Aug. 10, officials said.

U.S. Marine Corps Capt. Matthew Manoukian, 29, was a Los Altos Hills resident and a graduate of St. Francis High School in Mountain View. According to the U.S. Marine Corps Special Operations Command, Manoukian died around 2 a.m. local time in Afghanistan's Helmand province.

Manoukian was serving in the 1st Marine Special Operations Battalion in support of Operation Enduring Freedom, and was likely conducting a meeting with village leaders at the time of his death, a Marines spokesman said. Among his commendations for past exemplary service, Manoukian had received two Purple Hearts, according to the Marine Corps.

"On behalf of the entire Court family, I wish to express our profound sorrow," Santa Clara County Superior Court Presiding Judge Richard J. Loftus said.

"Matt was killed in action serving his country and the death of this amazing man is a tremendous loss to our community and nation," Loftus said.

Manoukian had previously served as a platoon commander for the 1st Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment in Camp Pendleton and had also served in Iraq, according to the Marine Corps. He was both an airborne parachutist and a 1st degree Black Belt.

Manoukian is survived by his parents, Santa Clara County Judge Socrates "Pete" Manoukian, and state appeals court Associate Justice Patricia Bamatre-Manoukian, and his two brothers, Michael and Martin.

The memorial is scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 18, at 3 p.m. at St. Francis High School Gymnasium, 1885 Miramonte Avenue, Mountain View.

In lieu of flowers, the family prefers memorial donations to the Captain Matthew Patrick Manoukian Tribute scholarship fund made out to Saint Francis High School, and sent to Kevin Makley, President, St. Francis High School, 1885 Miramonte Ave., Mountain View, CA 94040-4098.

She was preceded in death by her sons Robert Paul and Jerome Luis, and her daughter, Nancy Rachael.

Nancie is survived by 18 grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren. She will be remembered by her numerous nieces and nephews and their children as well.

She lived life with passion and possessed a constant curiosity about the world around her. She took great pleasure in her grandchildren and great grandchildren, always wanting to go to the hospital to be one of the first people to hold the new baby. She loved reading, puzzles, was an avid viewer of All My Children, loved Pepsi, Kentucky Fried Chicken, The Grateful Dead and never met a cup of coffee she didn't like.

She participated in an art class at the Alzheimer's Center in San Jose. She enjoyed the craft and music programs there.

Nancie passed away quietly at Los Altos Sub Acute and Rehab Center in Los Altos, California. She courageously and valiantly fought Alzheimer's Disease first at home with her long time home health aide, Marshella Collins, and with the loving care of her granddaughter, Rachel Kappelmann Jonas, and her grandson, Nolan Skiver, and then the skilled nursing staff who continued her care with respect and gentle kindness.

We thank the family and friends who came to visit and support us during this difficult time. A Celebration of Life reception will take place next Saturday at 1 PM to honor her memory and share stories.

the district board's policy says. "Grades are not influenced by a student's behavior, student characteristics and/or non-academic indicators."

When grades are a composite of too many factors, Sarraf said, it can be confusing for a student to understand how he or she really arrived at that final mark.

"You won't survive in the real world if you don't have good work habits," Sarraf said, acknowledging a common critique of the new system. However, she continued, teachers and their department teams are working on ways to assess and give feedback on non-academic factors separately. "It's all about providing useful feedback to students instead of lumping it all together."

Teachers, kids, courses

There are 14 new teachers working throughout the district this year, Sarraf said, along with as many as 90 more students than last year, spread across both Mountain View and Los Altos high schools.

This year also comes with a slew of new classes — some brand new, others duplications of existing classes to meet student demand.

The construction program — which began at Mountain View High School last year and gives students access to hands-on exercises in masonry, plumbing, electrical work and roofing — will expand, taking on students from the neighboring continuation high school, Alta Vista.

Los Altos, which has long had a robotics club, will now have an official class for school credit. Both comprehensive high schools will now offer three levels of Mandarin language courses.

On the Advanced Placement front, Sarraf said she is "totally stoked about" a new AP computer science course at Mountain View High School. There will also be a new AP Japanese course at MVHS and an AP Latin course at LAHS.

But the associate superintendent said she is perhaps most eagerly anticipating the introduction of a health career class at Los Altos High School. Students in this course will learn how to measure blood pressure, test for blood sugar levels, measure eyesight for corrective lenses, practice sports medicine and work with a blood-drawing simulator built into a plastic model of a human arm.

Khan Academy

Two Mountain View High School teachers will be using Khan Academy's online tutorials to help their students learn algebra and geometry, Sarraf said. The limited introduction of the Mountain View-based, online instructional tool comes after MVHS math instructors, Justin Sligh and Jared Darby, each had success using Khan Academy in their summer school classes.

Sarraf said the district brass is "intrigued" by Khan Academy, which is headquartered on Castro Street and has garnered national attention and praise for its line of instructional YouTube videos and interactive online tests.

"We don't know exactly what it's going to look like at this point," she said of the future of Khan Academy in the district. "We are considering it as one more tool in our toolbox. We are definitely still in the exploratory stage. We are exploring the benefits."

One such benefit, Sarraf said, is that some teachers in the Los Altos School District, as well as in the Mountain View Whisman School District, have been using Khan Academy. She said it would "make sense for us to continue to provide access to that tool" to students as they matriculate into MVLAs high schools. ▣

Hot dog! Dittmer's reopens

For sausage fans, the worst of times is over — Dittmer's Gourmet Meat and Wurst-haus is open again. The grand opening at its new location, just across the Mountain View border at 4540 El Camino Real in Los Altos, drew an enthusiastic response. The local favorite has been closed since January of last year, when a fire originating in a smoker damaged the shop's former location on San Antonio Road in Mountain View. The new, larger shop, which opened Aug. 8, used to house a Wells Fargo bank branch.

Google fined $22.5 M over privacy settings

By Gennady Sheyner

Google will be required to pay a $22.5 million penalty after the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) charged the Mountain View-based Internet search giant with misrepresenting its privacy settings to its users.

The privacy settlement, which according to the FTC is the largest penalty ever for violation of a commission order, came after a Stanford University graduate student uncovered the company's placement of "cookies" on users' computers even if they use Apple's Safari browser, which is set by default to block the cookies. Cookies are data that is stored in a browser that tracks users' online activities. They are often used by companies to send targeted ads to users.

In addition to the penalty, the FTC's order requires Google to "disable all tracking cookies it had said it would not place on consumers' computers," according to a commission statement.

Jonathan Mayer, the Stanford student who brought Google's cookie policy to light, wrote in a February post on his blog that Google and Vibrant Media (a company that specializes in display advertising) "intentionally circumvent Safari's privacy feature." He also provided on his blog a detailed technical analysis of Apple's Safari browser and the process Google followed for planting cookies despite the privacy features.

The FTC charged in its complaint that Google had been placing cookies on computers of Safari users for several months in 2011 and 2012, "although Google had previously told these users they would automatically be opted out of such tracking, as a result of the default setting of the Safari browser used in Macs, iPhones and iPads."

According to the FTC, Google's "misrepresentations" violated its October 2011 settlement with the FTC, which barred the company from "misrepresenting the extent to which consumers can exercise control over the collection of their information."

The commission issued a statement Thursday, Aug. 9, saying that its settlement "is intended to provide a strong message to Google and other companies under order that their actions will be under close scrutiny and that the Commission will respond to violations quickly and vigorously."

"No matter how big or small, all companies must abide by FTC orders against them and keep their privacy promises to consumers, or they will end up paying many times what it would have cost to comply in the first place," John Leibowitz, chairman of the FTC, said in a statement. ▣

LEGO THEFT

Police found hundreds of unopened LEGO sets — many special-edition items — at his gated, multimillion-dollar home, according to court papers. Items from the three stores were found at Langenbach's home, according to a police report filed with the court.

Investigators also found eight Ziploc bags containing labels with fraudulent barcodes in his 2011 Toyota Sienna van. There were also shipping boxes in the home. Police say he had an eBay account, through which he has sold 2,100 items since April 17, 2011.

Mountain View police spokeswoman Liz Wylie previously said Langenbach sold about $30,000 in merchandise on an eBay account under the name Tom's Brickyard. At the time of his arrest, 193 items were for sale. Most were LEGO sets, according to court papers.

He is charged with four counts of second-degree burglary — entering with intent to commit theft — for the Mountain View and Cupertino thefts. The popular, expensive LEGO toys are a target for thefts, and Target stores keep a close watch on the products, conducting daily inventories, Wylie said.

Langenbach told police that he did not intend to steal the items, according to court papers. He said that he had seen a video on YouTube about how to make fake barcodes to get cheaper toys. He switched the barcodes out of curiosity, to see if it really worked. He also wanted to see if the customer price scanner and cash-register scanner priced the items the same or cheaper, he said.

He told police he was not paying attention when he checked out the item on May 8 and that he hadn't checked his receipt to see if the price was cheaper before leaving the store, according to the police report. He denied having switched the barcodes in the other incidents. Police have also linked a credit card he used for his eBay account to one used in one of the April 20 incidents, according to the report.

Supervising Deputy District Attorney Cindy Hendrickson has said although the thefts for which Langenbach is charged only amount to about $1,000, the sophisticated nature of the crimes and presence of hundreds of boxes of the toys in his home — with a number of them assembled and staged for photographing — led the DA's office to file the felony charges, she said. If convicted on all current counts, he could receive a maximum five-year sentence.

Langenbach's attorney, Thomas Greenberg, said he could not comment at this time on his client's decision not to take a plea deal. ▣

JOB'S HOUSE

Jobs' two-story home was undergoing construction and was unoccupied at the time of the burglary, according to the police. Jobs' widow, Lauren Powell Jobs, had told the police that the home has been uninhabitable because of major renovations since mid-June. The general contractor for the renovation discovered the burglary on the morning of July 18.

While police had confirmed that two Apple computers and an iPad tablet were among the items stolen, they are still working to ascertain what other Apple products were taken during the burglary. Other items that were reported stolen included a wallet with credit cards, various iPods and remotes, a Ninja Blender, a Sodastream Soda Maker and "Monster Beats by Dr. Dre" headphones, a Tiffany platinum and aquamarine necklace valued at $33,000, another Tiffany necklace with diamonds valued at $28,500 and a pair of earrings valued at about $3,000.

Investigators relied on search records, serial numbers, IP addresses and social-media sites to track down the suspect. They learned after contacting Apple that the operator of the iPad in question was trying to re-install the operating system the morning after the burglary and was connecting to Apple servers through a wireless AT&T connection. They then used the IP address in this connection to link the equipment to two Apple iTunes accounts, one of which belonged to McFarlin.

Between July 24 and 26, investigators tracked down more evidence linking the stolen computers to other IP addresses associated with McFarlin's iTunes accounts. They received search warrants related to his customer accounts and learned from Apple's investigators that McFarlin used the iPad to log on to his iTunes account, according to investigator Marshall Norton's report.

Investigators made further headway on July 29, when they tracked the same iPad to a Comcast IP address associated with a woman living in Alameda County. They then learned that the woman, Jacqueline Richard, was one of McFarlin's "friends" on Facebook. Officers and REACT investigators used this evidence to get a search warrant for McFarlin's Alameda home. They raided the house on Aug. 2 and arrested McFarlin without incident. Norton wrote in the report that while at the house, he observed an iMac on a desk in the kitchen area. The computer's serial number was the same as on the computer that was taken during a burglary.

During his interview with REACT Task Force Agent Tim Crowley, McFarlin allegedly admitted that he stole two iMacs, three iPads, three iPods, an Apple TV, a diamond necklace and earrings and "several other items" found in his house, including a wallet with $1 inside it. According to the report, McFarlin told investigators that he threw several furniture cushions over the cyclone fence installed around the house because of renovations and dropped the stolen property on to the cushions to protect the items from breaking.

McFarlin also allegedly told the investigators that he had shipped the jewelry from the Waverley home to a seller in Pennsylvania (Palo Alto officers have since identified this seller, who agreed to return the jewelry). He also said he put the stolen items into his storage locker in Alameda. He consented to have the agents search the locker. Inside, they found a wallet containing Steve Jobs' driver's license, credit cards and "other personal items."

McFarlin explained during the interview that he had been homeless and was living on the streets in his car, according to the report. He said he targeted the house because it appeared to be under construction and unoccupied. He allegedly told investigators that he was alone and that he did not realize whose house he was in until he was inside and he saw a letter addressed to Jobs. ▀ had to overcome to get to this point and to ultimately become Olympic champions."

But if you ask any of the Krikorians, the long haul to the "biggest stage in the world for athletics," as the coach put it, has been worth it. "It's an incredible feeling," Adam said.

"It was just a wonderful journey that ended in the most fantastic way it could have," the elder Krikorian told the Voice. "Adam's team responded to every challenge and brought home the gold."

"We're both so proud of the way he handled himself," the jet-lagged Krikorian said, speaking for himself and his wife, who still live in the same Mountain View house where their son was raised and first became interested in water polo.

The coach said he was going to take a few months to rest and explore his options, which are numerous after his recent accomplishment.

"Ultimately, I want to do something in which I know I can help and I can be the biggest benefit," he said. ▀

View-based Google has allowed the district to purchase enough licenses for ST Math that the program can be used at every school in the district.

Another large grant from French telecommunications company Alcatel-Lucent has allowed Theuerkauf to purchase a cart full of tablet computers, which will run programs like ST Math and Khan Academy, Goldman said, and the district's educational foundation is working to raise enough money so that other district schools might also get a tablet cart.

"The vision, with respect to ST Math and Khan, is that all schools will have access to the programs, all schools will have access to the training to use the programs successfully, and all schools will have access to the hardware to be able to use the programs — not only in the computer lab but in the classroom as well," Goldman said.

Beyond that, he hopes more and more kids will be able to start using these types of programs at home.

Goldman said the district is doing well financially. "The district expects to have a positive ending balance for 2012-13, and does not expect to implement furloughs or reductions in programs," he said, adding one caveat: he is concerned about the "long term impact of fiscal insecurity on the district if the governor's tax package is not passed in November."

Goldman is particularly enthusiastic about continuing to solidify the EDI program at district schools. He said the method of instruction provides direct feedback to teachers and ensures that students of different levels of ability are able to work together without having to speed up or slow down too much to accommodate others in the class. "We're dedicated, as a district, to focusing on the implementation of EDI over the next 10 years," he said.

That's why five of the district's best EDI teachers will be put on special assignment this year. They will be free from teaching a class and instead will be going into the classrooms of other teachers to observe and provide instant, real-time feedback on what their colleagues are doing well and points where they might improve. "This coaching model is a great way to go, because it removes concerns about evaluation from the process and focuses on ensuring that both students and teachers are successful," Goldman said. ■

dents gardening in order to emphasize working with the land to provide sustainable eating for local communities. Last week's harvest was the school's first in its new location at St. Athanasius Church in Mountain View, which has a 7-acre garden space to grow fruits, vegetables and flowers.

"We're trying to integrate the idea of sustainability into our curriculum, and really a lot of it is providing the students with some opportunities in which they can make a difference in the world," Sinclair says. "It has a lot to do with giving them tools, integrating the classroom lessons to hands-on, real-life experience."

Students from first to eighth grade spend an hour a week learning gardening. High school students have a one-week agriculture program taught by Sinclair, who says she is looking into expanding the high school gardening experience. All students who work in the summer garden are volunteers.

Apart from common produce, Sinclair has filled the school's garden with rare, often indigenous, crops such as red tortilla corn and ancient Sonora wheat. She is also growing barley, cowpeas, rye, potatoes and 30 different kinds of beans.

"I go to all these rare seed-saving places and exchange seeds with all these indigenous people, I bring them back and see what grows well," Sinclair says. "There's a lot of things growing that you won't find in the supermarket. I'm experimenting with what I grow, and what I've found is that everything grows." ▣

EDITORIAL THE OPINION OF THE VOICE

Possible lifeline for Pearson House

Despite its shabby appearance, there might be more life left in the historic Pearson House downtown, which now sits in the way of a planned four-story office building at 902 Villa Street, next to Chez TJ.

After losing a bid to move the 1880s home to Cuesta Annex, the City Council gave developer Roger Burnell permission to demolish the house if a plan did not materialize to save it.

But then the Voice received a letter to the editor from Josephine Manoli, who said she has space for the home on her property, if the owner is willing to move it.

We hope this will be the start of a plan to save the old green house, which Manoli says would fit in perfectly amid her collection of antiques and remnant buildings near her bungalow farmhouse at 1181 Bonita Ave., not far from Bubb Elementary School and Bubb Park.

Burnell said he is “completely interested in Manoli’s offer,” and that he is looking forward “to contributing to the successful relocation of the Pearson House.” So far, Manoli said she has not heard from Burnell.

Hopefully, this could be the first step toward moving and restoration of this historic property, which belonged to its second owner, Charles Pearson from 1892 to 1946. An entrepreneur, Pearson owned a grocery store from 1905-1918 at 220-230 Castro Street. He had earlier owned the Old Haverty Corner Saloon on Castro and Villa, according to a report included in a recent environmental impact report done for the city.

With the offer from Manoli and another interested party whom Burnell would not reveal, the outlook has brightened considerably for saving the old home, after the council turned down Burnell’s offer to move it to the Cuesta Annex.

If the house is located on her property, Manoli said she would be willing to grant public access to the home a few days a week, similar to a schedule in force now for the Rengstorff House at Shoreline. And, she added that she would also be interested in taking the “immigrant house” on the same property, which resident Maria Marinovich is attempting to save. The tiny structure once housed her Croatian grandparents and would be much easier to move than the larger Pearson House.

This is an opportunity that the city should not pass up. The City Council should do everything possible — waiving any fees that could stymie the process — to facilitate moving the home and then restoring it, as Burnell promised to do in his offer for the Cuesta Annex move. In that failed effort, the contractor agreed to spend as much as $500,000 to move and restore the home.

We hope Burnell will continue to honor that offer, rather than rush to demolish this relic, which was the home base for one of the city’s earliest businessmen.

LETTERS VOICES FROM THE COMMUNITY

HEALTHCARE POSSIBLE FOR $100 A MONTH?

As a prolific inventor and composer of piano music, many of my solutions come to me in my sleep and I awaken with the essential answers. So it is that on a recent night I dreamed the absolute workable solution for comprehensive and truly affordable health care for everyone that would even cover all pre-existing conditions.

We need a national health care pool into which every working person pays only $100 per month (and $10 per month for each dependent), the pool to be administered by the U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO) to keep Congress and the IRS from raiding it.

With over 100 million people contributing every month to this pool, hundreds of billions of dollars would accumulate annually. Each person would be given what is essentially a health care ATM card with full access to the entire pool so that no matter how expensive a surgery or treatment or procedure or medication, the person would get it covered and the doctors and hospitals would not get cheated.

Of course this national health care pool would threaten the existence of the insurance companies which is a good thing because it’s time to remove them from the equation. The insurance companies are a collective of criminals who lobby our elected officials to swindle the American public.

Even corporations could establish their own health care pools by deducting the contributing funds from their employees’ paychecks. I’m sure every person working for a large company would give up one day’s pay each month to have 100 percent comprehensive health care with no deductibles that have to be met.

This out-of-the-box solution is the one we Americans need. Please send this to your Congress person, spread the idea.

WAR ON NATURE AT CUESTA ANNEX

When the City Council granted tentative approval to develop part of Cuesta Park Annex into a flood detention basin, they pledged to keep the rest of the Annex in its natural state.

The city’s own website states, “The conceptual design seeks to retain the existing rural and natural character of the Annex consistent with public input received during the Cuesta Annex master plan process, and past Parks and Recreation Commission and City Council meetings on the flood protection project.”

Nevertheless, the city's parks department is preparing to renege on that promise. Signs recently posted at the Annex declare the city's intention to trim the branches of the oak trees "to increase safety and visibility."

Although the signs also claim that the trees "will be trimmed in a natural manner," nature has already decreed that the branches will hang gracefully down to the ground. Trimming the oak trees, in any way, will greatly detract from their natural elegant appearance.

Apparently, the city's concerns about imagined perils in the undergrowth overrides its written assurances regarding the Annex. Maybe not surprising for a city once driven into a state of panic by errant squirrels.

CHICK-FIL-A HAS RIGHT TO POLITICAL VIEWS

Although I have no problem with gay civil-ceremonies and equal rights for gays, I take issue with the City Council's consideration of turning down the opening of a Chick-Fil-A restaurant here

The owner of Chick-Fil-A finances the restaurants with his own money and doesn't use any public tax money. Even more importantly, he and his brothers are entitled to their opinion that what constitutes "marriage" is a union between a man and woman. It is a First Amendment right of free speech and religious liberty.

By banning the restaurant from opening, city councils (such as Mountain View) are practicing economic scare tactics. In other words, if you don't change your views, your business is not welcome here. These are Gestapo techniques and go against our Constitution. If you don't agree with Chick-Fil-A then don't eat there but don't try and prevent them from doing business. That is un-American.

■ RESTAURANT REVIEW

New kid on the block

LA BOULANGE, FRESHLY ACQUIRED BY STARBUCKS, JOINS THE PALO ALTO CAFE SCENE

By Dale F. Bentson

The $100 million baby has landed in downtown Palo Alto. Born in San Francisco in 1996, La Boulange was the brainchild of Pascal Rigo, a French-American restaurateur with an eye for both high-quality product and bottom-line results.

About a month after the Bay Area chain opened its outlet on University Avenue, Starbucks bought La Boulange—for enough money to keep a moderate-sized country in coffee and pastries for a year. Now, according to Starbucks CEO Howard Schultz, La Boulange products will be sold in Starbucks' thousands of stores. Good for Starbucks and fabulous for the bakery. But what does it mean for us?

Well, excellent pastries, good soups and sandwiches and an inviting patio, for starters. Is this retail outlet different than other choices downtown? Yes and no, but I can attest to the superior quality of La Boulange's pastries. I've been a customer for years in its San Francisco shops and am extremely partial to its lemon bars ($3) and other delights.

La Boulange's European-styled pastries, not as unusual now as they were a decade ago, are crunchy, crispy, flaky, buttery and not overly sweet. There are savory tarts as well: cauliflower, vegetable, potato and onion, to name a few. The macarons, in an array of flavors, are melt-in-the-mouth delicious. Daily sweet pastries and desserts might include stone-fruit tarts, vanilla Napoleons and vanilla Trophezienne (creamy custard with vanilla bean and orange blossom extract.)

While pastry and tart selections

SIERRA DUREN

migrate with the seasons, the menu board for salads and sandwiches remains fairly constant. Soup-and-salad combos are available for $7.50, and soup du jour and French onion soups are $3 per cup, $5 per bowl. Both the hot tomato and the cold creamy gazpacho were full-flavored and fresh-tasting on my recent visits.

The half-dozen salad options were priced $8 to $10 and came with house-made organic bread. I was slightly disappointed with the La Boulange salad ($8.50).

SIERRA DUREN

La Boulange serves Equator Coffees, but that may change now that the chain was bought by Starbucks.

SIERRA DUREN

Diners have a choice of indoor or outdoor seating at La Boulange.

It was one egg over not-so-easy, lardons, croutons and frisee. It's a variation of the classic salad Lyonnais. The overcooked egg was hidden at the bottom of the bowl, with no soft yolk to fork over the greens and croutons, and the lardons were scarce. In all, a salad that needs retooling, presentation-wise and quality-wise.

On the other hand, the Provençal BLT sandwich ($8.75) burst with flavor. The bacon, lettuce, tomato and goat cheese were housed between slices of toasted ciabatta that had been slathered with aioli.

The hearty, creamy mushroomroasted-chicken open-faced sandwich ($9.25) included chives and caramelized onion in the mushroom sauce. It was filling with bold flavors, but reminded me more of an autumn dish than a summery one.

There were 15 warm sandwich choices, all of which came with a choice of greens, chips, quinoa salad or Boulange potatoes (strongly rosemary-flavored). There were cold sandwiches as well: including prosciutto and Swiss, goat cheese and tomato, and apple and brie.

There's a kids' menu as well as brunch, and beer and wine are now available. There is a lot going on in a small space.

The University Avenue location is not a bakery, though; it's an assembly outlet. That's not necessarily a bad thing, since the product is trucked down Highway 101 from South San Francisco daily. This allows for a greater selection of delicacies that wouldn't be feasible to manufacture in a prime location.

This spot at 150 University Ave. most recently housed Facebook. La Boulange has spiffed up the courtyard into an inviting street-side patio, partially shaded, with tables and awnings. There is comfortable indoor seating as well. In total, space for about 100 patrons at any time.

Currently, La Boulange serves the highly regarded Equator Coffees from San Rafael, but that's unlikely it will continue into the future. Starbucks, love it or not, says it plans to keep the La Boulange identity and, ideally, the very-high-quality products it manufactures. This will be a formidable problem as the scale of manufacturing balloons in the future.

Coffee/pastry/sandwich shops inspire fierce loyalty. The new kid on the block will attract its adher-ents. Without a big jump in our population, someone in the vicinity is bound to forfeit market share. We will watch the University Avenue corridor for developments. Good luck to all. ▀

MOVIE REVIEWS

BEASTS OF THE SOUTHERN WILD

(Guild) Independent filmmaking doesn't come any better than this. Newcomer Quvenzhané Wallis delivers a riveting performance as the child trying to make sense of her world on the wrong side of a southern Louisiana levee. She and her ailing father (Dwight Henry) struggle to stay afloat in The Bathtub, a floodplain populated with odd characters and littered with ramshackle housing — a hurricane away from disaster. The community refuses to be displaced. Director Zeitlin's gift is the ability to pack social commentary within a unique voice and look. He and co-writer Lucy Alibar address the difficulties of preserving a people and their culture in post-Katrina Louisiana. The imagery has a haunting quality, especially once the characters become unmoored. "Beasts of the Southern Wild" is a must-see movie of rare vision. And the defiant brown eyes of Quvenzhané Wallis burn with a warrior spirit you won't soon forget. Rated PG-13 for language, child imperilment, brief sensuality, disturbing images and thematic material. 1 hour, 33 minutes. — S.T.

THE BOURNE LEGACY

(Century 16, Century 20) Meet the new Bourne, same as the old Bourne. That's the impression left by "The Bourne Legacy," a would-be franchise refresher in which Jeremy Renner grabs the baton from Matt Damon. Everything in this film you've seen before, and quite recently, whether it be recycled from the "Bourne" trilogy or even Joe Wright's "Hanna," fer gosh sakes. What is this movie about? A chemically enhanced super soldier (Renner) discovers his masters have turned on him. Cross tracks down Marta Shearing (Rachel Weisz), the only surviving doctor who used to maintain him; now she too has been targeted. Renner and Weisz are as solid as one might respectively expect, but the film doesn't make us care much about them, or say anything more pointed about the state of American covert affairs than "We are morally indefensible and absolutely necessary." Instead, the film expends acres of talk on military doublespeak and technobabble. As Scott Glenn's CIA director confesses early on, "I've kind of lost my perspective on what's possible." Just remember, kids, you're not paranoid if they're really out to get you ... or your movie dollars. Rated PG-13 for violence and action. Two hours, 15 minutes. — P.C.

THE CAMPAIGN

(Century 16, Century 20) Will Ferrell and Zach Galifianakis bring their boundary-pushing comedic sensibilities to the world of politics with this uneven chuckler. The strong cast and topical plot help make for a hilarious first hour. But "The Campaign" eventually fizzles beneath a spattering of raunchy humor that too often misses the mark. Ferrell plays North Carolina-based U.S. Rep. Cam Brady as sort of an amalgam of George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton. Brady has long run unopposed in his district and again looks destined for re-election despite an episode of infidelity. The greedy tycoon Motch brothers (Lithgow and Aykroyd) are eager to supplant Brady with a candidate who will support their agenda, and turn to the oblivious and awkward Marty Huggins (Galifianakis), the son of a wealthy businessman. The filmmakers do well in not pandering to one particular side of the political spectrum. In fact, part of the movie's flair comes in avoiding actual politics (when an intern brings up a real political issue, Brady kicks him out of the campaign headquarters). Where the film falters is in its script. Winning scenes trade time with squirm-inducing moments. There is some smart social commentary tucked in, but it's tough to take seriously given the picture's crude undertones. "The Campaign" shows a great deal of promise and is a worthwhile viewing for Ferrell and Galifianakis fans. But, not unlike some politicians, it proves unable to live up to its own potential. Rated R for language, crude sexual content and brief nudity. One hour, 25 minutes. — T.H.

THE DARK KNIGHT RISES

(Century 16, Century 20) All the world's Gotham City in Christopher Nolan's ambitious Batman trilogy, which here comes to an emphatic conclusion. The screenplay by Nolan and his brother Jonathan takes inspiration from "A Tale of Two Cities" and Fritz Lang's "Metropolis" in depicting the levels of society: the 99 percent versus the 1 percent, the skyscrapers down to the sewers. The leitmotif of Nolan's well-orchestrated Batman saga is how a society, and an individual, responds to a fall. Batman has receded into billionaire Bruce Wayne (Christian Bale), a limping recluse. He faces two characters plucked from the pages of Batman comics: fearsome terrorist Bane (Tom Hardy) and cat burglar Selina Kyle (Anne Hathaway), who wants a "clean slate" in an internet age when information is immortal. The film delivers a whole lotta movie, with cast-of-thousands spectacle and giant-sized action. The Nolans consider the issues of the day (there's a big Occupy Gotham theme); explore the role of legendary heroes in galvanizing the public; and labor mightily to ensure that how their Batman ends dovetails with 2005's "Batman Begins." Rated PG-13 for violence, sensuality and language. Two hours, 45 minutes. — P.C.

DIARY OF A WIMPY KID: DOG DAYS

(Century 16, Century 20) "Diary of a Wimpy Kid: Dog Days" reunites the core cast of previous entries and maintains a tonal consistency. Here again is Every-boy Greg and the rest of the cast from the previous film. The summer-themed adventure that picks up where "Diary of a Wimpy Kid: Rodrick Rules" left off, at the end of Greg's seventh-grade year. As for the tone, it's strictly middle-school slapstick and middle-class worries, like how to dodge parental expectations and play video games instead. Even for an episodic kiddie farce, "Dog Days" seems overly familiar in its comic premises and conflicts. But it'll all be new to its intended audience, who are likely to lap it up as happily as the Heffleys' new mutt, Sweetie, at his water dish. Like its predecessors, "Dog Days" offers a mostly shapeless plot, as Greg gets into varieties of trouble, shooting himself in the foot when it comes to his friendship, courtship and family life. The main thread involves Greg lying about having a job at the Plainview Heights Country Club so he can spend time around Holly; as a result, dedicated gamer Greg realizes the outdoors aren't so bad after all. And so "Dog Days" gently imparts a lesson or two, about taking responsibility for and learning from mistakes. The oddest thing about the movie is that this kid-lit adaptation hardcore disses reading. Rated PG for some rude humor. One hour, 34 minutes. — P.C. (Reviewed Aug. 3, 2012)

HOPE SPRINGS

(Century 16, Century 20) "I want a real marriage again." With those words in the dramedy "Hope Springs," Meryl Streep's housewife throws the gauntlet before her husband of 31 years, played by Tommy Lee Jones. Streep's Kay Soames ropes her husband Arnold into a weeklong program run by "You Can Have the Marriage You Want" author Dr. Bernard Feld (Steve Carell). The master class in acting put on by Streep and the particularly pitch-perfect Jones is the big draw here. While Carell, like his character, expertly facilitates, the leads put themselves under the microscope, finding fascinating rhythms in their give-and-takes, and speaking volumes with body language. "Hope Springs" turns out to be a different kind of mainstream movie, wielding star power to turn a giant, unsparing mirror on its target audience: in this case, baby boomers in stale marriages. There's a weirdly riveting intensity — and a real sense of privilege — to the way the movie takes us into squirmy private moments and focuses nearly every scene on the sometimes funny, more often sad dynamic between the two lead characters. A handful of comic flourishes lean toward jokiness at odds with the film's greater scheme, of dramatic cultivated awkwardness between two people facing hard truths. Also, one might well wish for a chink in the armor of Carell's too-perfect shrink. But the movie's countercultural commitment to character and performance is enough to give "Hope" a try. Rated PG-13 for mature thematic content involving sexuality. One hour, 40 minutes. — P.C.

RUBY SPARKS

★★★★1/2

(Palo Alto Square, Century 20) "Ruby Sparks" is the brainchild of Zoe Kazan, who wrote the screenplay and plays the title role ... of a brainchild. Ruby is the perfect woman for young, frustrated novelist Calvin Weir-Fields (Paul Dano). He knows this because he wrote her, tapped her out on his typewriter to break through his writer's block. Ruby literally comes to life and once Calvin takes the magical-realist leap and accepts that Ruby isn't going anywhere, he starts enjoying life with the girl of his dreams. "Ruby Sparks" makes an entertaining admonishment for anyone navigating the tricky terrain between initial attraction and a lasting relationship, a lesson in seeing the real person behind the exterior that attracts us. There's plenty of quirky humor. Dayton and Faris also get serious comic mileage from Calvin's life-loving mother (Annette Bening) and stepfather (Antonio Banderas), joyous contrasts to Calvin's fretfulness. But "Ruby Sparks" proves it's something special by being unafraid to follow its premise to a dark place, the dream turning into a nightmare. In a time of mind-numbing rom coms, "Ruby Sparks" uses fantasy to get real about modern romance. Rated R for language including some sexual references, and for some drug use. One hour, 44 minutes. — P.C.

A HISTORY OF CARING

For fifty years, Community Services Agency (CSA) has been providing vital social services for residents of Mountain View, Los Altos, and Los Altos Hills. We understand that hardship can come at any time and knows no age limit. We provide a safety net so that independence and self-sufficiency can be restored and maintained.

An evolving name reflects an evolving organization

CSA has grown from humble origins. In 1957, a group of Mountain View residents, concerned about the welfare of low-income families in the city, gathered to talk about the plight of the local migrant farm workers. They decided to form the Mountain View Welfare Council to address the needs of this population. Within a year, the council was incorporated, and it was planning its first sharing of holiday gifts for families.

By 1967, the interests of the council had expanded to include housing issues, immigration issues, and the needs of senior citizens. Accordingly, its name was changed to the Mountain View Community Council.

With a move into larger, permanent office space in 1974, the organization changed its name once again, this time to Mountain View Community Services, reflecting the increasing services provided, such as meals and counseling.

CSA assumed its present name, Community Services Agency, in 1982, in recognition of a client base that extends through Los Altos to Los Altos Hills.

A growing repertoire of programs and services

CSA's first program in 1958 was a holiday gift distribution called Christmas Clearance. Later called Santa Claus Exchange, the program remains today an important element of CSA's work, now the Holiday Sharing program.

1974 was a big year for the agency. Clothing distribution was added to a growing list of Emergency Assistance services. Also, the agency moved into larger facilities at 204 Stierlin Road, Mountain View. Interior painting of the building was performed by clients and board members, while volunteers from the Mountain View Police Department handled the move from the old office space to the new.

Another milestone occurred in 1977, with the initiation of food service to the needy.

CSA's Emergency Assistance program added crisis intervention services in 1982 and the Community Kitchen (food distribution) and financial assistance services in 1983. The Senior Services program added transportation in 1983 and case management in 1984.

In 1989, the agency launched a new Homeless Services program designed to lift the homeless up from their situation to rejoin society. The Alpha Omega Shelter was the first service offered, in cooperation with 17 local churches.

CSA conducted a capital campaign and dramatically upgraded its facility in 1990. Among other features, the building had greater capacity for food service, then termed the Food Closet.

The Homeless Services program stepped up in 1995 with the creation of Graduate House, a transitional housing facility managed by Project Match. CSA was a partner in this facility.

In 1998, CSA fundamentally changed the nature of its Food and Nutrition program by creating the Food Pantry (grocery store for the needy) at the Stierlin Road facility and discontinuing its meals program.

Another fundamental change occurred in 2006, when CSA discontinued the rotating homeless shelter in favor of enhanced case management services, pursuing the demonstrated "housing first" model for serving the homeless. The revised program is now called Alpha Omega Homeless Services.

Programs Originated or Facilitated by Community Services Agency

Throughout its history, CSA has been a source for new, innovative social services within the community. Many of these services are now administered by other agencies. A few examples:

- The first day care center in Mountain View, now Whisman Child Care Center.
- Mountain View Community Health Center, now managed by a community group.
- Transportation services for students in English as a Second Language (ESL) classes, now operated through Mountain View-Los Altos Adult Education.

- The first Brownie and Scout groups for minority children, now integrated into the Girl Scouts.

The agency has also sought and established partnerships with other nonprofit providers, to ensure their delivery to CSA's clients. Examples: Women Infants and Children, Lawmobile, and Rotacare.

CSA Today

Mature at age 55, CSA now follows a strategy of first contact for the community's needy, providing fundamental services and referring clients to other agencies for additional services.

Caring for the homeless

CSA's Alpha Omega Homeless Services provides case management, direct assistance, and referral services (most importantly housing) to individuals and families. CSA partners with numerous other county service providers, assembling a comprehensive package of assistance to the local homeless population. Caring for the working poor and unemployed

CSA's Food and Nutrition Center supplements the nutrition requirements of needy families with fresh and staple groceries. Food items are contributed by community supermarkets and by nonprofit organizations like Second Harvest Food Bank and Hidden Villa.

CSA's Emergency Assistance program provides a much needed helping hand to those afflicted with short-term severe needs. Assistance includes rent, utility payments, short-term shelter, medical purchases, and many services for children, especially related to school.

Holiday Sharing, providing food to families and fun toys to kids, is a joyful program that draws together volunteers and clients from throughout the community.

Caring for the elderly

Senior Services is the fastest-growing CSA program, reflecting the growth of the elderly population in our community. Case managers deliver in-home assessments, counseling, referrals, and educational seminars, designed to allow local seniors to remain safe and independent.

Our Senior Nutrition Program at the Mountain View Senior Center serves subsidized hot lunches every weekday, countering the isolation and apathy that can afflict the elderly.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE FOR CHANGE OF NAME SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA FOR THE COUNTY OF SANTA CLARA
Case No.: 112CV228141

TO ALL INTERESTED PERSONS:
Petitioner: ANDREW MENDEL HUEY filed a petition with this court for a decree changing names as follows: ANDREW MENDEL HUEY to ANDREA MARIA HUEY.

THE COURT ORDERS that all persons interested in this matter appear before this court at the hearing indicated below to show cause, if any, why the petition for change of name should not be granted. Any person objecting to the name changes described above must file a written objection that includes the reasons for the objection at least two court days before the matter is scheduled to be heard and must appear at the hearing to show cause why the petition should not be granted. If no written objection is timely filed, the court may grant the petition without a hearing.

NOTICE OF HEARING: October 9, 2012, 8:45 a.m., Room: 107 of the Superior Court of California, County of Santa Clara, located at 191 N. First Street, San Jose, CA 95113.

A copy of this ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE shall be published at least once each week for four successive weeks prior to the date set for hearing on the petition in the following newspaper of general circulation, printed in this county:

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF:
RUDOLF VARRO
Case No.: 1-12-PR 171049

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of RUDOLF VARRO. A Petition for Probate has been filed by: ANNE MARIA VARRO in the Superior Court of California, County of SANTA CLARA.

The Petition for Probate requests that: ANNE MARIA VARRO be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

The petition requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held on September 21, 2012 at 9:00 a.m. in Dept.: 3 of the Superior Court of California, County of Santa Clara, located at 191 N. First St., San Jose, CA, 95113.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

“Thank you so much for your support throughout the process of selling my home — I’m thrilled with the outcome! Your expertise, attention to detail, communication, sensitivity and support team were outstanding. Although the process was like a roller coaster at times, I always felt secure because you were there by my side managing the bumps and taking care of the details. You are the best!”
