“Growing up, my mom used to say I had two stomachs, and one solely reserved for ice cream, and I still believe that,” said Robyn Sue Fisher, owner and creator of Smitten Ice Cream.

The love of ice cream always hovered in the back of Fisher’s mind as she went through college and explored career options. Unhappy with the corporate world, she returned to academia, studying business at Stanford University. While there, Fisher made a bold choice.

“I decided to dive into something I love and try to make it better, and that thing is ice cream,” she said.

In 2009, Smitten Ice Cream debuted on the streets of San Francisco, where Fisher hauled around a red wagon selling her sweet creation. The wagon was equipped with Fisher’s version of an ice cream machine, which would churn out fresh, smooth ice cream by the scoop. Two years later, all the hauling paid off: Fisher opened her first location in the Hayes Valley neighborhood.

After adding another location in Rockridge, and a location coming soon in Lafayette, Fisher opened a third store on El Camino Real in Los Altos. The ice cream shop is attached to the Whole Foods Market, which Fisher visited when she was a student in the area. She said she always dreamed of opening a shop near Stanford.

Fisher described the partnership with Whole Foods as a match made in heaven. “(It) gives creditability to our brand ... being approved by Whole Foods, as using good ingredients and being the real thing,” she said.

The machine that first churned Fisher’s ice cream is now known as “Brrr,” a patented device that took years and the help of seven engineers to design. She originally got the idea from a Stanford physics professor who would conduct demonstrations making ice cream using liquid nitrogen as a coolant, she said.

In using this method, the “Brrr” machine cools the ingredients to an extremely low temperature of minus-321 degrees within minutes. The low temperature creates smaller ice crystals than normal ice cream machines, resulting in surprisingly smooth scoops.

Organic milk and cream, sugar and flavorings go into the machine and the end product is a flawless sphere with a consistency that Fisher compares to “frozen pudding.”

Smitten ice cream is unique, she said, not only because of the way it is made, but also because of its quality and taste. All ingredients are sourced locally in California, and everything is made to order from scratch, with handpicked ingredients.

Customers have the options to choose from a handful of pairings each season, such as the strawberry-white-balsamic flavor, or classic favorites like vanilla and or chocolate.

Each shop employs an open kitchen where customers can see through the glass how their treat is being made by one of the shops "brrristas."

"It is really important to us to be fully transparent, because we are proud of every ingredient that goes into our food," Fisher said.

The brain behind Smitten's ice cream combination is pastry chef Robyn Lenzi, who makes all the recipes. The process behind creating these unique ice cream flavors is critical, Fisher said.

"Every season we revisit recipes, because every harvest is different," she said giving an example how one rhubarb crop might be more tart than another. "So by revisiting the recipes, we see if we need to change anything in the ratios."

Currently, the Los Altos location is the only one offering "brrrgers," Smitten's twist on an ice cream sandwich. One "brrrger" offered includes a shortcake bun, brown sugar ice cream and peanut butter and brown sugar caramel spreads.

Brrristas are trained to be knowledgeable about the products, and can explain any scoop of ice cream — breaking down what is in a particular offering and where different ingredients

Neighbors

★★★1/2

(Century 20) Even more so than its recent forebears (and this is saying something), the new comedy film “Neighbors” is all about the riff. With Seth Rogen taking center stage, that’s not such a bad thing: a steady flow of one-liners improves the odds for laughs.

It’s not easy having less story than a Will Ferrell movie, but “Neighbors” is undaunted. With less a plot than a series of sketches, the latest film from Nicholas Stoller (“The Five-Year Engagement,” “Forgetting Sarah Marshall”) explores variations on the theme of bad fences making bad neighbors, as the fraternity Delta Psi Beta moves in next door to a couple whose early parenthood already has them emotionally vulnerable. “Just because we have a house and a baby doesn’t mean we’re old people,” insists Kelly Radner (Rose Byrne), as much to convince herself as her husband Mac (Rogen). In the process of attempting to befriend and, failing that, master their loud-partying neighbors, Kelly and Mac set about proving they can keep up with the Joneses, despite being the parents of a baby daughter. Representing for the frat house are its president, dumb party animal Teddy Sanders (Zac Efron), and vice president, the studious, going-places Pete (Dave Franco). If Pete is motivated by letting off some steam between exams, Teddy is all about achieving his legacy through some legendary party, as yet undreamed of, to be remembered for decades to come, and both value brotherhood. With their potential for harshing the party vibe, the Radners quickly become Delta Psi Beta’s natural enemies, to be outmaneuvered at every turn.

What follows is something akin to “The War of the Roses” (though it could do with a bit more of that film’s savage satire). Though the rest of the neighbors are only glimpsed, the conflict between the Radners and Delta Psi Beta makes an effective microcosm for local politics at the neighborhood level, where selfish interests, petty though they may be, take on outsized proportions. Accountant Mac and stay-at-home mom Kelly need their sleep, as does their growing child, but the frat, with “I’ve gotta be me” self-confidence and love of thumping, bass-heavy music, can’t not party all the time.

Rogen essentially plays himself (which he’s proven good at), while Byrne comically unleashes femme fatality as but one weapon in her Machiavellian arsenal. The best, and funniest, part of “Neighbors” is its refusal to shunt Kelly to the sideline, and there’s a hilarious, postmodern argument between the marrieds about their correspondence to film and TV stereotypes. When Kelly proves capable of her own goofy failings, Mac defensively complains that she’s filling his comfortable role of low expectations for men: “Haven’t you seen a Kevin James movie?”

Andrew J. Cohen and Brendan O’Brien’s screenplay is smart enough to humanize Teddy a little (as the senior belatedly realizes he has squandered his chance to learn anything that might serve him outside of a frat house) and to own up to the Radners’ transgressive selfishness (while still excusing them as just-folks in the end). Nimble performances by the likeable top-billed foursome go a long way to making the anemic story feel satisfying. It’s all very larky and goofy, and if you can meet “Neighbors” in that place (and assuming you have a tolerance for raunchy, R-rated comedy), you can get a nice buzz off of it.

Rated R for pervasive language, strong crude and sexual content, graphic nudity, and drug use throughout. One hour, thirty-six minutes.

Belle

★★★1/2

(Aquarius) In much the same way films based on novels often send moviegoers to bookstores, films “based on a true story” often send moviegoers to historical accounts to find out what really happened. Generally speaking, the movies always seem inadequate in comparison to their source material, but when they make enticing “previews” for actual history, they do a kind of service, especially to young audiences, and perhaps that’s the best that can be said for the simplifications of “Belle.”

“Belle” opens in 1769, as Captain John Lindsay (Matthew Goode) of the Royal Navy locates his biracial illegitimate daughter “Belle” and rescues her from slavery. Lindsay installs the girl with his great-uncle William Murray, First Earl Of Mansfield (Tom Wilkinson) and his wife Lady Mansfield (Emily Watson). Though immediately scandalized, they take in the girl — full name Dido Elizabeth Belle — and before long, she’s part of the family, albeit a part of the family not allowed to take dinner with them.

Once full grown, Dido (Gugu Mbatha-Raw) begs the question of a husband, an awkward situation for a “mulatto” girl raised by high-society whites. Matters are less complicated for Dido’s sisterly cousin — and bosom companion since childhood — Elizabeth Murray (Sarah Gadon). Screenwriter Misan Sagay takes creative license to create, pretty much from whole cloth, an Austen-esque romantic drama from this situation, in which money is an issue (the cinematic Dido winds up a well-off heiress to her father’s fortune, whereas Elizabeth has no such dowry on offer) but race even more so.

Dido has two options, one perfectly adequate (James Norton) if more or less transparently interested in Dido’s exoticism and dowry rather than her soul, and a dashing downlow suitor that oozes passion for both her and social justice: vicar’s son and aspiring lawyer John Davinier (Sam Reid). “I think love must be a very complicated thing,” Dido muses, but it’s simple for the viewer. Clearly, Davinier is the man for her, further evinced by his abolitionist advocacy. Unfortunately, this latter point sets him at odds with Lord Mansfield, who, as Lord Chief Justice, is considering a slave trade case with the potential to disrupt “the finances that hold up England.” The powerful social forces at play — from propriety to slavery — give the story some heft. Director Amma Asante wrangles crisp period imagery, and in its broad strokes, “Belle” captures the intrigue of the real Dido, subject of a famously captivating portrait that is more fascinating and extraordinary than the film around it. Raw makes Dido charismatic without being unduly confident or modern, and the subtleties of Wilkinson’s performance go a long way to selling a script that consistently favors blunt statement over subtext (kudos too to an underused Watson and Miranda Richardson as the crafty mother of Belle’s first suitor).

“Belle”’s triumphant racial enlightenment has clearly been rigged for maximum dramatic impact and uplift (the real Davinier, by the by, was a gentleman’s steward, not the upwardly mobile intellectual of the film). Older viewers may be unconvinced by the imposed narrative formulas, but with its PG rating (and a dastardly supporting role for Tom “Draco Malfoy” Felton), “Belle” makes a fine opening to engage kids in some race-based social and legal history.

Rated PG for thematic elements, some language and brief smoking images. One hour, forty-four minutes.

Upgrade. Advance.

Summertime means more daylight and usually more free time, especially for kids liberated from busy school schedules. Don't let that freedom turn into boredom though; Mountain View has a myriad of classes — from Bikram yoga to guitar to ballet — to keep people with all interests occupied, even exhilarated, during the summer months.

The Class Guide is published quarterly by the Mountain View Voice, The Almanac and the Palo Alto Weekly.

What makes Y camps different?

We believe every child deserves the opportunity to discover who they are and what they can achieve. Y campers experience the outdoors, make new friends and have healthy fun in a safe, nurturing environment. They become more confident and grow as individuals, and they learn value in helping others. We offer day, overnight, teen leadership and family camps. Financial assistance is available. Get your summer camp guide at ymcasv.org/summer

500 Help Wanted

Multimedia Sales Representatives

Embarcadero Media is headquartered in Palo Alto and operates diverse media enterprises, including the region's most respected and award-winning community newspapers and specialty publications, websites and e-mail marketing products.

Locally-owned and independent for 34 years, we publish the Palo Alto Weekly, Mountain View Voice and Almanac on the Peninsula and the Pleasanton Weekly. In each of these communities our papers are the dominate, best-read and most respected among its various competitors. We also operate extremely popular interactive community news and information websites in all of our cities, plus unique online-only operations in Danville and San Ramon. Our flagship website, Palo Alto Online (http://paloaltonline.com), attracts more than 150,000 unique visitors and 600,000 page views a month.

As the first newspaper in the United States to publish on the web back in 1994, the Palo Alto Weekly is recognized throughout the state and nation as a leader in transforming from a print-only news organization to an innovative multimedia company offering advertisers and readers new and effective products. In 2013, the Weekly was judged the best large weekly newspaper in the state by the California Newspaper Publishers Association. Its web operation, Palo Alto Online, was judged the best newspaper website in California.

The Palo Alto Weekly and Embarcadero Media are seeking smart, articulate and dedicated experienced and entry-level sales professionals who are looking for a fast-paced and dynamic work environment of people committed to producing outstanding journalism and effective marketing for local businesses.

As a Multimedia Account Executive, you will contact and work with local businesses to expand their brand identity and support their future success using marketing and advertising opportunities available through our 3 marketing platforms: print campaigns, website advertising and email marketing.

The ideal candidate is an organized and assertive self-starter who loves working as a team to beat sales goals and possesses strong verbal, written, persuasive and listening interpersonal skills and can provide exceptional customer service.

Duties, responsibilities and skills include:

- * Understands that the sales process is more than taking orders
- * Has a strong understanding of how consumers use the Internet
- * Can effectively manage and cover a geographic territory of active accounts while constantly canvassing competitive media and the market for new clients via cold calling
- * Can translate customer marketing objectives into creative and effective multi-media advertising campaigns
- * Ability to understand & interpret marketing data to effectively overcome client objections
- * Understands the importance of meeting deadlines in an organized manner
- * Can manage and maintain client information in our CRM database system, is proficient in Microsoft Word and Excel and has knowledge of the Internet and social media
- * Ability to adapt objectives, sales approaches and behaviors in response to rapidly changing situations and to manage business in a deadline-driven environment

Compensation includes base salary plus commission, health benefits, vacation, 401k and a culture where employees are respected, supported and given the opportunity to grow.

To apply, submit a personalized cover letter and complete resume to: Tom Zahralis, Vice President, Sales and Marketing, Embarcadero Media, 450 Cambridge Ave., Palo Alto, CA 94306. E-mail to: tzahralis@embarcaderopublishing.com

Stylish Home in a Popular Location

242 O'Keefe Way
MOUNTAIN VIEW

Move in and enjoy this beautiful townhome, built in 2009 with many quality upgrades! Three levels over 1,458 sq. ft. (per county) include 3 bedrooms and 2.5 baths, with one bedroom at the entry level and 2 suites on the third level. The main level includes the living room, dining room, and a sparkling kitchen with stainless steel appliances, wine cooler, granite countertops and island, and pretty pendant lighting over the breakfast bar. The living room offers a fireplace, wiring for a flat screen television, plus a media organizer. Nearby is a half bath and the washer/dryer center with extra storage. Upstairs, the master suite is luxurious with a walk-in closet and bathroom with a two-sink vanity and Piedrafina marble finished shower. Fine amenities include Brazilian cherrywood flooring, oil-rubbed bronze fixtures in all bathrooms, front door security system, 3-zone a/c, gorgeous custom window treatments, a 2-car attached garage with built-in storage. Ideally located with easy access to the complex hot tub, swimming pool, and play structures. Caltrain is nearby plus, Sylvan Park and Steven's Creek Trail with paths for walking and biking. Mountain View schools include Landels Elementary, Graham Middle, & Mountain View High School (Buyer to verify enrollment).
