Story by Sheila Himmel // Photos by Michelle Le

Once upon a time, downtown Los Altos was all about antiques and senior citizens. Now, if you don't have small children and a City Select stroller to put them in, forget about it. Eatery Forest on First is the latest of the downtown triangle businesses catering to young families.

Once there was only Linden Tree Books, a landmark in its fourth decade. Now the H&H company started by Mary and Brian Heffernan operates six family-friendly or child-focused businesses in downtown Los Altos. They and their four daughters under age 7 can walk to all these shops from their home.

Mary Heffernan was preparing for medical school when she opened

Forest on First's butter lettuce salad, served with chicken.

Academic Trainers, a small tutoring and test prep company in Menlo Park. Brian Heffernan was an attorney. In 2011 they opened Bumble, a full-service restaurant in Los Altos, as a place where families would feel welcome and the menu would not be dumbed down for kids. Also important, given that both Heffernans are from farm families, was that kids should know food comes from plants and animals, not stores.

There are good and bad sides to this development, depending on your family's age and income. On the one hand, are Los Altos' public parks dangerous? Are young parents too important to pack lunches and meet in a park? Is this another sad step in the relentless retreat of the wealthy behind pay walls?

On the other hand, the food I sampled was quite good. If I had small children and wanted occasionally to meet a friend for lunch and actually have a chance to talk, I'd probably consider Forest on First a haven.

And as the popularity of farmers' markets shows, it's nice to know whose hands have brought forth your food. Producers and their locations are listed on a chalkboard at Forest on First. They are as close as Hidden Villa in Los Alto Hills — a source of eggs, produce and sometimes a pig.

It is a challenge to keep up the seasonal menu. Even in California, diners expect to eat avocados all year.

Another challenge is changing the menu fast enough to keep up with produce availability. On our visit, a menu item called butter lettuce salad ($12) was made of baby red romaine and green leaf lettuces, not butter, and had Brazil nuts in place of almonds. Still, it was a large and luscious mix, studded with woody maitake mushrooms, mild ricotta salata and tomato vinaigrette.

The tuna sandwich ($12) also had a minor case of false advertising: Instead of watercress there was arugula. It's an expensive tuna sandwich, but you are paying for hunks of freshly toasted focaccia from Berkeley's Acme Bakery, not a couple thin slices of commercial bread. You're also paying for celery heart, capers, Castelvetrano olives and tuna conserva (poached, not canned).

Crispy baby artichokes ($8) are perfection with mint aioli. Toto, we aren't in fast food land anymore.

My one complaint was that the iced coffee ($4) from San Crispy baby artichokes come with a mint aioli dipping sauce.

Francisco's Blue Bottle had been sitting too long and was bitter. Others have complained that the drip coffee ($3) takes too long and the smoothies cost $7.

Even at these prices, you can't have everything. You may not get right into a restroom because, even as large and well-appointed as they are, there is one for men and one for women. Diaper changing takes time. Even on a quiet mid-afternoon, there was a wait for a restroom. During lunch or brunch, forget it.

Other amenities include cold filtered water, garbage bins simplified into plastics and organic, dishcloth napkins and real tableware.

During our lunch, the only kids eating were in round, woodsy high chairs. You have to be at least age 2 to play in the tree house, a play structure that hugs the perimeter of the dining room, equipped with climbing ropes and walkways. Those playing were totally happy. We did see to-go boxes for leftovers, containing $6 sandwiches from the kids' menu. The kids' menu also offers spaghetti with meat ($7) or vegetarian ($6) sauce, macaroni and cheese ($6) and fish and chips ($6).

You could argue that dining in a play area does not prepare kids for behaving in real restaurants. Also, online reviewers have complained about the menu prices and the $5 charge for children to use the play structure.

Kids in the treehouse, a play structure surrounding the dining room, can keep an eye on their parents.

"You can't have awesome and cheap," Mary Heffernan said.

If it were free, people would come just to use the play structure and crowd out the people who want to eat. On weekdays they have "happy hour" from 3 to 5 p.m., when it's just $1 to play.

H&H's next projects include another restaurant in Los Altos slated to open this summer and a ranch in Fort Jones, up near the California-Oregon border. At the ranch, they plan to raise cattle, chickens and pigs, and particularly focus on free-range pasteurized eggs. They also plan to utilize the ranch to educate children about sources of food.

Once upon a time, before the antique stores, Los Altos was all about apricot orchards. H&H is bringing back a bit of that agricultural heritage. ■

■ MOVIE REVIEWS

MALEFICENT ★★

In spite of a stampede of CGI special effects, it's old-fashioned movie-star wattage that stuns in "Maleficent." Disney's revisionist take on its own "Sleeping Beauty" almost certainly wouldn't have been made were it not for Angelina Jolie, whose presence recalls the Old Hollywood potency of Greta Garbo. If only the film around Jolie, directed by Robert Stromberg, were worthy of her. Disney's struggle to do restitution for its princess-myth years continues by re-imagining Maleficent as an orphan fairy queen (Isabelle Mollay) flying happily about her wooded land as "protector of the moors" from a nearby human kingdom. But when she grows of age to take her crack at love and experiences a deeply traumatizing betrayal, Maleficent (Jolie) turns on a dime to vengeance against the man responsible: King Stefan (Sharlto Copley). But instead of allowing Maleficent to articulate her pain, we merely get five seconds of Jolie wailing in anguish before she decides black is the new black. Ironically, "Maleficent" is at its most arresting in the scene that tinkers least with the source material: when Jolie, newly decked out as the villainous version of Maleficent, sleekly strides up to Stefan's throne and curses his infant daughter Aurora. But we're not meant to enjoy this display as much as we do, as the film's raison d'être is to explain Maleficent's humanity. It's a noble cause to re-conceive evil as just a person you haven't figured out yet, but some classic tales lend themselves more readily to such an approach than others. The screenplay by Linda Woolverton (Disney's "Beauty and the Beast") next sends Maleficent on a journey of remorse for having misdirected her anger onto an innocent. The babe grows into teenage Elle Fanning, who has a date with a spindle and maybe with Brenton Thwaites' Prince Phillip for a "true love's kiss," but as the narration promises, this story is "not quite as you were told." Rated PG for sequences of fantasy action and violence, including frightening images. One hour, 37 minutes.—P.C.

A MILLION WAYS TO DIE IN THE WEST ★★1/2

There's no accounting for taste, they say, which might explain the $549 million gross for Seth MacFarlane's 2012 comedy "Ted." Something tells me the planet won't go quite so gaga for his sophomore effort, "A Million Ways to Die in the West," but it's considerably better — even within spitting distance of good. In 1882, sheep farmer Albert Stark (MacFarlane) languishes in the frontier town of Old Stump, Arizona. Too smart-mouthed for his own good, he finds himself in one of those Main Street quick-draw showdowns, but his cowardice spoils his relationship with local girl Louise (Amanda Seyfried). Albert's having a hard time letting go of her when Anna (Charlize Theron) turns up in town and volunteers to help him show Louise what she's missing. But we know something Albert doesn't: that Anna has gone AWOL from the gang of bandit Clinch Leatherwood (Liam Neeson). Plus Anna's "help" gets Albert in another gunfight, this time with Louise's new boyfriend Foy (Neil Patrick Harris), who runs the town "moustachery." These threats give the screenplay a bit of useful tension, but the main throughline is romantic comedy as Albert slowly awakens to Anna's interest in

Safe, Clean Water and Natural Flood Protection

Public hearing

Modification to the San Francisquito Creek Flood Protection Project

Santa Clara Valley
Water District

Priority E: Provide flood protection to homes, business, schools and highways.

What: Public Hearing on Modification to the San Francisquito Creek Flood Protection Project

When: June 10, 2014 at 6:00 p.m.

Where: District Headquarters — Board Room
5700 Almaden Expressway,
San Jose, CA 95118

Due to the level of external funding available, staff recommends modifying the program document to advise the public of the level of flood protection that can be achieved at this time.

As stated in the Modified Project Description, the local-state-funding-only project will be the same as the preferred project downstream of Highway 101; but upstream of Highway 101, the project will remedy channel constrictions and modify bridges at Newell Road and Pope/Chaucer Street to allow the channel to contain flood waters equal to the channel's capacity of 7,000 cubic feet per second (cfs), approximately a 30-year flood event. Allowing this level of water to flow through the channel will protect approximately 3,000 parcels in Palo Alto from a flood event close to the February 1998 flood, the largest on record. Currently, the channel can only convey a 15-year flood event.

If sufficient funding becomes available, a 1 percent (100-year) flood protection project upstream of Highway 101, including some combination of: modifications to the University Avenue and Middlefield Road bridges; upstream detention; underground bypass channels; and floodwalls, could be built.

San Francisquito Creek, 1950s flood event

Proposed modifications to key performance indicators:

- 1. Preferred project with federal, state and local funding: Protect more than 3,000 parcels by providing 1 percent flood protection.
- 2. With state and local funding only: Protect approximately 3,000 parcels from flooding (100-year protection downstream of Highway 101, and approximately 30-year protection upstream of Highway 101).

The full board agenda memo will be posted online on May 30, 2014 at www.valleywater.org.

For more information on the public hearing, please contact Melanie Richardson at (408) 630-2035, or by email at mrichardson@valleywater.org.

Edge of Tomorrow

(Century 16, Century 20) Game over. Restart. It's an option familiar in the virtual worlds of video games but, alas, not in real life. The new sci-fi action movie "Edge of Tomorrow" uses the narrative structure of a video game to present a "what-if" scenario: what if we could keep pressing "start" every time we fail?

That's a fantasy that's been dramatically explored before, in works like David Ives' playlet "Sure Thing" and Harold Ramis' 1993 film "Groundhog Day." "Edge of Tomorrow" — based on Hiroshi Sakurazaka's light novel "All You Need is Kill" — doesn't have anything new to contribute, other than wedding the concept to a different genre, but it's a good fit, resulting in a fairly eye-popping futuristic war story with a clever (to a point) structure.

Tom Cruise stars as Major William Cage of U.S. Army Media Relations. With Earth losing a war to powerful tentacular, mouth-glowing aliens, Cage is content being just shy of a draft dodger, with little more than decades-earlier, never-applied ROTC training to fall back on should he find himself in combat. And find himself in combat he does when he ticks off General Brigham (Brendan Gleeson), gets busted down to private, and winds up on a suicide mission. Cruise nicely plays Cage's anti-heroic freak-outs, which add flavor and stoke a rooting interest in his surviving long enough to redeem himself.

In a sequence that suggests the alien-war equivalent of D-Day, the Army lands on the West Coast of France and proceeds to get slaughtered by the aliens. But when Cage gets face-fried with alien goop, he reawakens with a start a day before the battle. As he repeatedly relives the day, he eventually discovers that Special Forces soldier Rita Vrataski (Emily Blunt) — celebrated as the "Angel of Verdun" — holds the key to the mystery of what's happening to him, and together, they may be the only two people who can save humanity.

Basically, "Edge of Tomorrow" follows the same beats as "Groundhog Day," but raising the stakes. Cage first must work through his Cassandra complex, then accept his lot and work to change his situation for the better. By nature of the plot device, "Edge of Tomorrow" also implicitly deals with some philosophical questions about how we live our lives: we only get one shot at any given interaction or situation, but if we could heighten our sensitivities, we could communicate much better, get much further, and even see strangers as they really are rather than writing them off in an instant. And, as in "Groundhog Day," the protagonist learns selflessness and finds love.

The acting is expectedly solid (Bill Paxton has some fun with the role of Cage's befuddled master sergeant), and thanks to director Doug Liman ("The Bourne Identity"), the impressively realized battle sequences are rip-roaring. It's all a bit wearying by the home stretch, and a resolution that (like much of the film that precedes it) only sort of makes sense. But it's summer, and we're not supposed to think too much at the movies. This is a game worth playing once, though you probably won't be dying to push "Restart" any time soon.

Rated PG-13 for intense sequences of sci-fi action and violence, language and brief suggestive material. One hour, 53 minutes.

— Peter Canavese

Driving Miss Daisy on Broadway

Winner of the 1988 Pulitzer Prize for drama — and immediately made into a Best Picture-winning 1989 film — Alfred Uhry's play "Driving Miss Daisy" was originally produced off-

Broadway in 1987 before at last enjoying a Broadway run with Vanessa Redgrave, James Earl Jones, and Boyd Gaines in 2010. Last year, that same production — with Angela Lansbury replacing Redgrave — toured Australia, where it was "captured for cinema." A partnership between Screenvision and the newly formed Broadway Near You brings this Stagecast to movie theaters this week.

Lansbury plays imperious Atlantan widower Mrs. Daisy Werthan, a retired fifth-grade English teacher who makes life difficult for her son Boolie (a stalwart Gaines). When the play opens, Daisy is 72, and a car accident has rendered her all but uninsurable. Boolie's solution is to hire driver Hoke Colburn (Jones). Himself no spring chicken, Hoke immediately proves savvy in his people skills and, crucially, at maneuvering around white folks. But his ultimate test will be "Miss Daisy," who's resistant partly out of prideful denial of her advancing age, partly in fear of the familiarity and intrusion this black man would seem to represent.

In sketches spanning from 1948 to 1973, the play depicts Hoke's slow breakdown of Daisy's latent racism and her walls of self-defense to reach detente and something like an arranged marriage. There resides the play's nominal tension: how close can these two come to making a soulful connection as something like equals? There's no mistaking "Driving Miss Daisy" as anything but a lean play, and its comfort zone is almost sit-comedic, coming to life most often in the odd-couple back-and-forths between Daisy and Hoke. As a white man, Uhry accepts the limitation of his perspective, telling the story from the privileged perspective of the Werthans.

Being the great actor that he is, Jones takes this as a proper challenge, imbuing his character with his well-known booming voice but also with subtleties of conflicted feelings. His Hoke is clearly a moral man, but also one who has chosen optimism not only as a survival tactic for being around white folks but for living life. Jones' genius is in occasionally clueing us in that it's not a one-time choice, but one that he must make over and over again, and not easily.

Lansbury's performance may be a bit broader, but it's no less satisfying, from the verbal railroading that establishes Daisy to her reactions to benign attacks on her equilibrium and, eventually, her physical and mental diminution. The old Dame has impeccable comic timing and control of her instrument, and there's a beautiful refinement to how she delineates Daisy's softening, for better and worse, into second childishness.

Esbjornson's production skillfully moves from scene to scene while providing a bit of scale to the staging. Five cameras unobtrusively capture it all. Here's a terrific gift for American theater lovers who can't just hop a plane to Melbourne to see the 87-year-old Lansbury play Miss Daisy opposite the 82-year-old Jones: for a fraction of a Broadway ticket price, Broadway Near You offers front-row seats.

Not rated. One hour, 26 minutes.

him. The whole of the film is lesser than the sum of its parts due to deficits of ambition, invention and commitment. You may feel at times like you're in a writer's room hearing jokes pitched rather than enjoying a final draft. In the deficit column, MacFarlane puts famous friends to waste in tee-hee cameos or underwritten parts, even as he struggles to hold the screen in his first on-camera leading role. The real stars here are the Monument Valley scenery, Theron and Harris, who demonstrates his comic Midas Touch by making funny gestures and funnier noises between limp lines of dialogue. Rated R for crude and sexual content, language, some violence and drug content. One hour, 56 minutes. — P.C.

BLENDED ★1/2

Sometimes Adam Sandler works for others and makes an interesting and sophisticated film. Mostly, though, he churns out branded "Adam Sandler comedies," in which he doubles as both producer and star. One of the latter, "Blended" is shamelessly, relentlessly crass and/or manipulative, wholly commercial and utterly conventional. But established formula endures because it works with audiences who don't mind a cinematic Happy Meal. Sandler plays Jim, a widower and clueless single father to three daughters, whom he has languishing in dowdy "pageboy Prince Valiant" haircuts and unflattering polo shirts and sweatpants. As a teenager, Hilary (Bella Thorne) suffers these indignities the worst, with teen boys constantly mistaking her for a bro. Tween Espn (Emma Fuhrmann) — named after the cable sports outlet — communes constantly with "Invisible Mommy," and Lou (Alyvia Alyn Lind) earns her keep as a cornucopia of cuteness and emotional truth-telling. The film opens with Jim botching a date with divorcee Lauren (Drew Barrymore). She's got two hellion sons who are rebelling against their neglectful father (Joel McHale) and mom's tight reign. Why, those boys need a father! Those girls need a mother! Those singles need each other! These two wacky families find themselves on a collision course when they accidentally wind up sharing a South African vacation package and bond over safaris and tribal dancing. Surprisingly, "Blended" is not one of Sandler's most racially offensive movies. Yes, it uncritically accepts the cartoon tourist-trap resort version of Africa, but there are such resorts, and folks enjoy their theme-park attractions just like the ugly Americans in this movie do. As always, Barrymore proves extremely appealing — she's far better than her material — and Sandler can do his laconic comedy and mawkish melodrama in his sleep. "Blended" could be so named because it purees your brain for two hours. Sure, you could do better with your hard-earned cash. But you'll receive no judgment here. Rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, and language. One hour, 57 minutes. — P.C.

X-MEN: DAYS OF FUTURE PAST ★★1/2

The best superhero movies in some way work against the grain, like Christopher Nolan's Batman movies (Gothic films grounded in an urban crime aesthetic and global socio-politics) or Bryan Singer's X-Men films, which draw on a constellation of interesting characters and play on a scale epic not only for action but in cultural, political and historical implications. "X-Men: Days of Future Past," restores Singer to the director's chair of the franchise he launched with 2000's "X-Men." A loose adaptation of the comic book story by Chris Claremont and John Byrne, the film wields time travel as the last hope for mutants, in 2023, facing a holocaust from the high-powered robotic Sentinels. A small band of survivors — including Professor X (Patrick Stewart), Magneto (Ian McKellen) and Storm (Halle Berry) — resolve to use the powers of Kitty Pryde (Ellen Page) to send the consciousness of Wolverine (Hugh Jackman) back into his 1973 body. Then, Wolverine will seek out the younger Charles "Professor X" Xavier (James McAvoy) and Erik "Magneto" Lehnsherr (Michael Fassbender) and enlist their help to stop Mystique (Jennifer Lawrence) from assassinating the creator of the Sentinels, Bolivar Trask (Peter Dinklage), inadvertently ensuring his work gets fast-tracked. It's OK — take a deep breath. One of the miraculous strengths of the new film is its coherence once it gets rolling. With its high-stakes story and large cast of characters, the film keeps up its momentum with ease, with plenty of humor balancing the darkness. But what makes "X-Men: Days of Future Past" more than just a science-fiction action flick is the past-present poignancy, indulging everyone's fantasy of telling a younger self what he or she needs to hear. Rated PG-13 for sequences of intense sci-fi violence and action, some suggestive material, nudity and language. Two hours, 11 minutes. — P.C.

Part Time Drivers

Part time drivers in the Palo Alto area wanted to driver older adults to various appointments for Avenidas. Average hours are 7 to 15 per week for a competitive hourly rate. You need a clean driving record and agree to a background check. You will drive your own car so you need complete insurance coverage. You are reimbursed for mileage.

Drivers receive a schedule via email the day before their assigned shift identifying the passenger locations, pick up time and destinations.

This is a good way to serve your community while getting paid. If you are interested, contact Phil Endliss at pendliss@avenidas.org to learn more.

Multimedia Sales Representatives
Embarcadero Media is headquartered in Palo Alto and operates diverse media enterprises, including the region's most respected and award-winning community newspapers and specialty publications, websites and e-mail marketing products.

Locally-owned and independent for 34 years, we publish the Palo Alto Weekly, Mountain View Voice and Almanac on the Peninsula and the Pleasanton Weekly. In each of these communities our papers are the dominate, best-read and most respected among its various competitors. We also operate extremely popular interactive community news and information websites in all of our cities, plus unique online-only operations in Danville and San Ramon. Our flagship website, Palo Alto Online (<http://paloaltoonline.com>), attracts more than 150,000 unique visitors and 600,000 page views a month.

As the first newspaper in the United States to publish on the web back in 1994, the Palo Alto Weekly is recognized throughout the state and nation as a leader in transforming from a print-only news organization to an innovative multimedia company offering advertisers and readers new and effective products. In 2013, the Weekly was judged the best large weekly newspaper in the state by the California Newspaper Publishers Association. Its web operation, Palo Alto Online, was judged the best newspaper website in California.

The Palo Alto Weekly and Embarcadero Media are seeking smart, articulate and dedicated experienced and entry-level sales professionals who are looking for a fast-paced and dynamic work environment of people committed to producing outstanding journalism and effective marketing for local businesses.

As a Multimedia Account Executive, you will contact and work with local businesses to expand their brand identity and support their future success using marketing and advertising opportuni-

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF:
JILL STANDBRIDGE
Case No.: 1-14-PR-174542
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of JILL STANDBRIDGE.

A Petition for Probate has been filed by: LEIGH S GATELY in the Superior Court of California, County of SANTA CLARA. The Petition for Probate requests that: LEIGH S GATELY be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held on July 21, 2014 at 9:30 a.m. in Dept.: 12 of the Superior Court of California, County of Santa Clara, located at 191 N. First St., San Jose, CA, 95113.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58 (b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

108 Bryant Street #30, Mountain View

Nobody knows your neighborhood like your neighbor.

*3 bedrooms, 2.5 bathrooms
1,263 square feet*

Here it is! Your opportunity to own a fabulous home in the heart of downtown Mountain View! Located 1 block from Castro Street, this rarely available top floor townhome-style condo has all that you desire - convenience, contemporary living and Castro Street!

CONVENIENCE:

This is a commuter's dream location - Nearby 237/85/101 get you where you need to go whether up or down the peninsula or across the bay. Just a few blocks from Cal-Train and the transit center, a lovely bike ride from Google, Microsoft or LinkedIn, or a quick Lightrail ride to the 49ers new Santa Clara stadium. It couldn't get more convenient than this!

CONTEMPORARY LIVING:

Offering a lovely layout of 3 bedrooms, 2 1/2 bathrooms, with vaulted ceilings, an abundance of natural light, large walk-in closet, new wall to wall carpet, and not one, but 2 underground secured parking spaces.

CASTRO STREET:

Offered at $848,000
