Mountain View zero-waste activist offers recipes, lessons and inspiration

Anne Marie Bonneau adds sugar to her ginger beer starter in her Mountain View kitchen. She makes most of her foods from scratch in an effort to live a "zero-waste" lifestyle.

Most interviews don't start with a slice of freshly baked sourdough bread, sips of homemade kombucha and bites of "krautchi," an intense hybrid of sauerkraut and kimchi. But Anne Marie Bonneau is not most interviewees. The bread, kombucha and krautchi are all products of Bonneau's efforts to produce zero waste in her Mountain View kitchen — and have fun doing it. The bread is made from starter (just water and flour, which she bought in bulk) that's lasted her more than a year. The kombucha — poured from glass bottles, never plastic — is made from tea and fermented farmers market produce like watermelon, mango, elderberry and lavender. The krautchi is fermented cabbage, also housed in a glass jar.

Going zero waste means absolutely no plastic, reusing everything, simplifying shopping habits and making almost everything from scratch. It's a minimalist, return-to-roots lifestyle that's gained increasing traction in recent years as people have become more aware of the vast amount of food that goes to waste in America. There are now numerous zero-waste blogs (including Bonneau's, "The Zero-Waste Chef"), books, YouTube how-to videos, news articles and events like "Feeding the 5,000" in Oakland, when 5,000 people feast on meals made entirely from food that would have otherwise gone to waste.

Going for zero-waste was not Bonneau's first step. It started in 2011, when her then-16-year-old daughter, Mary Katherine, started learning about the environmental impact of plastic waste and started her own blog,

"The Plastic-Free Chef." They soon cut out all packaged food, shopping almost exclusively at farmers markets and buying in bulk using handmade cloth bags and glass jars.

Both mother and daughter describe themselves as obsessed with food and cooking. On their kitchen table, next to the loaf of sourdough bread, kombucha and a fresh squash sit books like Dan Barber's "The Third Plate: Field Notes on the Future of Food" and "Bean Bible: A Legumaniac's Guide To Lentils, Peas, And Every Edible Bean On The Planet!"

After going plastic free, zero waste was an easy and logical next step, Bonneau said.

But when Mary Katherine were in her fridge along with eggs and baking soda, fried up in coconut oil.

Bonneau also teaches local workshops and free webinars. She hopes to give others the tools to at least start somewhere, even if they don't aspire to be as "hardcore" as she is about waste (she now makes her own vanilla extract, vinegar, shampoo and even deodorant).

"I just think we've forgotten how — we can barely feed ourselves," Bonneau said. She recently wrote a blog post on "five things I do that were once considered normal," which includes "(eating) food that taste good."

"People have asked if I would sell them my kombucha, but I'd rather just teach them how to do it. I think people don't want to just passively consume stuff," she said. "I think they want to actively make things."

Her advice to anyone interested in going zero waste is to start small. Get rid of all plastic bags; use reusable ones. Don't buy plastic water bottles or containers — glass is always better. Shop at your local farmers market. Meat is admittedly difficult, Bonneau said, but when she does buy it, she brings her own containers to Whole Foods Market.

Not only will you be doing the environment some good, your body will benefit as well. Bonneau said she eats much better than she did before — more vegetables and fruit, no processed food, less meat — and claims to have not had a cold since 2011.

"I had no idea when I started out this way that it would improve my life so much, but it really has," she said. "I don't get sick; we eat really well; it's fun."

went off to college, it became difficult to maintain her blog (and a plastic-free lifestyle). Bonneau asked if she could take over the blog; Mary Katherine said, "no way," and so Bonneau started her own, also with an emphasis on cooking.

"The Zero-Waste Chef" offers tips, from shopping to cooking to throwing dinner parties. Recipes abound, from "clear-out-the-fridge frittata" to fermented hot peppers to flourless chocolate coconut cake. The night before our interview, Bonneau made shredded vegetable fritters from leftover sourdough starter (which she also uses to make pancakes and waffles) and whatever veggies

Ty Simpkins and Nick Robinson play brothers visiting the "Jurassic World" theme park in the blockbuster franchise's new sequel.

Shifting out of 'park'

THE DINOS ARE BACK IN TOWN IN 'JURASSIC WORLD'

★★★ (Century 16, Century 20)

Making sequels to "Jurassic Park" is both a fait accompli and something of a fool's errand. The endlessly popular franchise has already brought in nearly $2 billion at the box office, but it also poses a significant challenge to directors and screenwriters hoping to create something fresh while still living up to Steven Spielberg's set pieces and telling the same basic story of dinosaurs run amok as people run screaming. But in the 14 years since "Jurassic Park III," the culture has had just enough time to miss this franchise, and director and co-screenwriter Colin Trevorrow ("Safety Not Guaranteed") has met the challenges with an appealing self-awareness.

"Jurassic World" returns to Isla Nublar, the fictional site of the original Jurassic Park. The old park lies in ruins, having been replaced by a gleaming new theme park — filled with genetically engineered dinosaurs — called Jurassic World, complete with shops, restaurants, safari rides, a marine show and an IMAX theater. Surprisingly, none of the previous three films featured dinosaurs overtaking a fully functioning theme park populated with tourists, so "Jurassic World" has a jolt of novelty that helps to recapture the wonder of the original 1993 film. Wide-eyed and gape-mouthed, young Gray Mitchell (Ty Simpkins) serves as our surrogate when he gets his first glimpse of the super-cool Jurassic World. He's accompanied by his too-cool-for-school older brother Zach (Nick Robinson), as focused on girls as Gray is on STEM edu-

The boys are V.I.P. guests of their inattentive aunt, Claire Dearing (Bryce Dallas Howard), the park's operations manager. She's busy touring the ultimate V.I.P. — park owner Simon Masrani (Irrfan Khan) — and keeping in line Velociraptor trainer Owen Grady (Chris Pratt), with whom she once had a date. Grady has his own problems fending off InGen head of security Vic Hoskins (Vincent D'Onofrio), who wants his company's genetic wonders to be weaponized as a military application. The various social tensions — between Claire and her neglected kin; the flirty, flinty never-weres Claire and Owen; and the competing interests of the Jurassic World stakeholders — all come to a head when (shock of shocks) the mother of all security breaches unleashes InGen's latest star attraction: a gigantic, incredibly dangerous hybrid dubbed Indominus rex.

Logic isn't exactly "Jurassic World"'s strong suit, but Trevorrow's key scenes turn out to be up to snuff, including a sequence of the boys being attacked while in a safari gyrosphere and the inevitable, old-school showdown between the two biggest dinos on the block. As always, the story functions as a cautionary tale of chaos and the illusion of control, "mad science" underestimating nature and corporate interests failing to protect humanity, much less scientific ethics. As Masrani puts it, "Jurassic World exists to remind us how very small we are, and how new."

But what gives "Jurassic World" a real kick is how this sequel script (credited to Rick Jaffa, Amanda Silver, Derek Connolly and Trevorrow) has "Jurassic Park" metaphorically fight off "sequel improvements" by reasserting what made the original work. "Let's be honest; no one's impressed with dinosaurs anymore," Claire opines. "Consumers want them bigger, louder and with more teeth." She might as well be talking of jaded sequel thinking. This film's comic relief (an ops tech winningly played by Jake Johnson of "Safety Not Guaranteed") sports a collectible Jurassic Park T-shirt in very poor taste, B.D. Wong's Dr. Henry Wu plays a part and the film's climax allows the old to triumph over the newfangled.

Trevorrow also knows a movie like this is bigger than anyone, and he handles the huge scale (including rampant product placement — remarkably, both major colas get a shout-out) with aplomb. It's the film's stock characters that hold it back from greatness: The actors seem almost irrelevant, and the characters — Pratt's always-right ex-Navy alpha male and Howard's tightly wound career woman who's not having it all — more lab-bred than the dinos. So it comes down to the huge-scale and the thrills, and in these respects, "Jurassic World" doesn't disappoint.

Rated PG-13 for intense sequences of science-fiction violence and peril. Two hours, four minutes.

■ MOVIE REVIEWS

LOVE & MERCY ★★★ 1/2

Can a person ever really change? At least for Brian Wilson — the musical genius behind the Beach Boys — the unfortunate answer is "yes." The biopic "Love & Mercy" literalizes this truism by casting two actors as Wilson (Paul Dano and John Cusack) and focusing on two periods in the man's life: his most creatively fertile period in the '60s, and the period in the late '80s when he met his current wife Melinda (Elizabeth Banks) and broke free of notoriously controlling therapist Eugene Landy (Paul Giamatti). As with the unconventional Bob Dylan biopic, "I'm Not There," screenwriter Oren Moverman considers what best represents his subject: Wilson's ascendance as the astonishingly talented pop-symphonic composer of "God Only Knows," his fall into damaging drug abuse and bedridden depression, the winter of his discontent with Landy and the redemptive spring offered by Melinda and reunited family and friends. In most respects, the film proves accurate in spirit and in fan service, including detailed recreations of photo shoots, promo films, concerts and the "Pet Sounds" studio sessions. Dano and first-time director/longtime producer Bill Pohlad show finesse in capturing Wilson's brilliance in the studio and the head space of a musical artist. Cusack bears less resemblance to Wilson and doesn't have Dano's mien, but he does a solid job of conveying Wilson's loneliness and fear (and his brain-fried spaciness) in the shadow of Landy. Wilson's innocent essence — optimistic and pure in its spiritual desires for love and art — make his story deeply moving. He's not the man he used to be, but he's surely earned his happy ending. Rated PG-13 for thematic elements, drug content and language. Two hours. — P.C.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF:

DAWN ELLEN HYDE

Case No.: 1-15-PR 176524

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of DAWN ELLEN HYDE.

A Petition for Probate has been filed by: SIOBHAN MARIE WALDRON in the Superior Court of California, County of SANTA CLARA.

The Petition for Probate requests that: SIOBHAN MARIE WALDRON be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on July 2, 2015 at 9:00 a.m. in Dept.: 10, of the Superior Court of California, County of Santa Clara, located at 191 N. First St., San Jose, CA, 95113.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58 (b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

DELEON REALTY SUMMER SPLASH

DeLeon Realty is excited to announce the July Summer Splash.

Buyers often want to buy homes during the summer so they can get settled before the new school year. However, real estate agents have traditionally advised sellers to wait until the fall because the low inventory causes buyers to lose focus.

In response to what buyers and sellers want, DeLeon Realty is breaking with tradition and releasing some of the year's best listings between July 13th and July 26th.

There will be special incentives for anyone who buys a DeLeon listing during the Summer Splash, including a $5,000 gift certificate to Flegel's Interior Design & Home Furnishings. That's right, DeLeon Realty will attract more BUYERS by giving them $5,000 to spend at one of Silicon Valley's best furniture stores.

Check out the next issue of The DeLeon Insight or visit www.DeLeonRealty.com for more information.

Give us a call at 650.488.7325 if you would like to list your home during our Summer Splash.

The home must be in contract by July 31, 2015. The transaction must close by September 1, 2015 and the Gift Certificate must be used by March 31, 2016. There is no cash value to the certificate. Lost certificates will not be replaced. The certificate will be issued in the Buyers' names and they are non-transferable. Please check our website at www.deleonrealty.com for further details.
