RESTAURANT REVIEW

Eureka! is an all-American restaurant. There's American craft beer, American small-batch whiskeys and a menu showcasing everything from burgers and wings to lollipop corn dogs. The company is headquartered in Hawthorne, Calif., home of legendary all-American band the Beach Boys.

With revenues north of $40 million, the Eureka Restaurant Group operates 20 restaurants in four Western states, focusing on locally sourced food and libations. According to Alexia Penna, the group's marketing manager, the company opens restaurants in "discovery markets" near universities and technology centers where creative and aspiring people live and work.

The company seeks architecturally interesting buildings as well. A new outpost opened in April at downtown Mountain View's 191 Castro St., a century-old building that most recently housed 191 Restaurant and Bar. Eureka gutted and opened up the interior, further exposed red brick walls and added rustic tables and chairs, upholstered booths and a banquette. A plank wood divider separates the bar and dining room.

The wall behind the bar displays an impressive array of tap handles and backlit glass shelves of whiskeys. The 50 small-batch whiskey count is impressive, but the 40 craft beers on tap — 20 that rotate, 20 that are always available — are the backbone of Eureka!'s beverage business. The all-

Eureka! restaurant is housed in a century-old building at 191 Castro St.

California wine list offers reds and whites from the Central Coast and Napa/Sonoma.

On Thursdays between 8 and 10 p.m., there is live music featuring a local artist (genres vary). Eureka's restaurants aren't cookie-cutter. Each has its own ambiance augmented with alliances with local events and artists.

The all-American menu had some solid hits but a few misses. For starters, there's the osso buco riblets ($10), a platter of pork cubes braised in sherry with a "firecracker" aioli. It was a generous portion of meat but I didn't care much for the sherry braise, which fell flat. It needed something else — cumin, spicy paprika, garlic or honey — to bring it to life. The firecracker aioli was tame.

I was much happier with the chili wings ($11.50) with your choice of sweet orange chili or house-made Carolina reaper chili sauce — reaper chilies are currently regarded as the hottest in the world. I opted for the hot stuff. It was fiery but not fire-extinguisher hot; it had flavor too, not just heat. It was plenty spicy but the kitchen mercifully tempered the piquancy. It was lip-smacking but not throat-burning.

The five fat lollipop corn dogs ($8) were more showy than delectable. The Polish sausage, embedded in too much sweet-corn batter, had almost no flavor, but corn dogs generally don't have much flavor. The slightly spicy porter mustard was the saving grace. The dogs were more exciting on the plate than in the mouth.

The truffle cheese fries ($9.50) was a pile of fries tossed in earthy truffle salt and topped with grated parmesan cheese and scallions, with a side of white truffle cheese dipping sauce. A little truffle flavor goes a long way, and this was just right.

All of the burgers were delicious, especially the Fresno fig burger ($12.50). Fig marmalade was spread inside a seeded bun, with goat cheese melted over the beef patty, and strips of crisp bacon added with a slice of juicy tomato, red onion, arugula and spicy porter mustard. It was a great combination.

Almost as good was the jalapeño egg burger ($12.50) with cheddar cheese, bacon, chipotle sauce and pickled jalapeños topped with a fried egg. All burgers came with crisp fries. Sweet potato fries were worth the extra $4.

Despite the great burgers, and there were nine to choose from, my favorite dish was the fried chicken sliders ($12). They were served with mashed potatoes, reaper chili sauce and coleslaw, all on a soft white bun — crunchy and smooth, spicy and fresh.

I wasn't excited about the "All Day" breakfast burrito ($12.50). The tortilla was stuffed with steak, potatoes, peppers (red, yellow and jalapeño), a slightly spicy rancho sauce, Monterey Jack cheese and sour cream, with a fried egg on the top and arugula on the side. Despite the cornucopia of ingredients, there wasn't much flavor. The ingredients seemed to cancel each other out.

For dessert, the butter-scotch rum pudding ($7) with caramel sauce, whipped cream and sea salt was grainy but not from the salt. The flavors just didn't come together and there was something off-tasting about it. The Americana apple crisp ($7), with warm caramelized apples, pecan-oat crisp and vanilla ice cream, was pleasing.

I like the concept, the ambience and the all-American vibe at Eureka. The burgers are first-rate, as are most other dishes, while a few items need some maintenance. The assemblage of American bourbons and craft beer is exceptional. ▣

STREEP DELIGHTFULLY OFFBEAT, OFF KEY AS SINGING HEIRESS

★★★ (Century 20)

"A few wrong notes may be forgiven, but singing without feeling cannot." Dubiously attributed to Beethoven, this epigram is offered in defense of the notoriously bad soprano Florence Foster Jenkins in the new cinematic account of her musical ventures. An irrepressible New York heiress whose money enabled her amateur singing career, Jenkins butchered opera selections and art songs while achieving a level of camp popularity, all winningly recreated by star Meryl Streep and director Stephen Frears in the comedy-drama "Florence Foster Jenkins."

The original screenplay by Nicholas Martin cleanly lays out the circumstances of Jenkins' insular life, as it was in 1944. Her longtime partner and common-law husband St. Clair Bayfield (a charming and funny Hugh Grant) lovingly attends to her, lining up vocal coaches, accompanists and private recitals at The Verdi Club (which she owns). After a gentle bedtime ritual of removing Florence's wig and lulling her to sleep with a Shakespearean sonnet, Bayfield repairs to a second apartment and a second woman, his girlfriend Kathleen Weatherley (Rebecca Ferguson).

In reference to Jenkins, Bayfield says, "Our marriage is a thing of the spirit." It's also a mutually beneficial arrangement, crisply established in the film's early scenes of Bayfield hiring pianist Cosmé McMoon (Simon Helberg of "The Big Bang Theory") and inviting back vocal coach Carlo Edwards (David Haig). With a knowing nod, Edwards says to Bayfield, "She spoils us all, doesn't she?" She does, but — at least as depicted here — Bayfield is no simple cad. He legitimately cares about Jenkins' feelings and takes attentive responsibility for them, including payoffs to "music lovers" and "reviewers."

That responsibility comes to a head when Jenkins becomes fixated on performing at Carnegie Hall, a dream Bayfield cannot deny her but one fraught with snares he may not be able to contain. Bayfield must lean on Edwards and McMoon for their support in maintaining the elaborate charade. McMoon, in particular, finds himself doing inordinate heavy lifting at the piano but also in his role as a new friend to the dotty coloratura. As the newest member of the family, McMoon also serves as an entry for the viewer to this strange world.

Earlier this year, the French film "Marguerite" took a looser approach to the same material, while offering a more intellectually and tonally subtle take. Frears ("The Queen," "Philomena") takes a somewhat brighter, more populist tack with "Florence Foster Jenkins" — and a more historically accurate one. Jenkins makes for a legitimately fascinating central character in her need for the spotlight, her pure love of music and the self-doubts that she uses all her will to banish. Not surprisingly, Streep expertly shades every eccentricity, embodying Jenkins in her musical waywardness (it takes a hard-working singer to sing this badly, note for note) and her deterioration due to syphilis, the most shameful wrinkle in her personal life.

The critic is the villain in "Florence Foster Jenkins," which sides with Jenkins and Bayfield in repelling the "mockers and ... scoffers" and propping up the dreamers. Yes, Jenkins serves as an example of runaway privilege, but her funny-sad story cannot help but win her sympathy. She may not have had an angelic voice, but in the end, Jenkins earns her wings.

Rated PG-13 for brief suggestive material. One hour, 50 minutes.

Special op

WWII SPY THRILLER 'ANTHROPOID' DETAILS ASSASSINATION PLOT

★★★ (Century 16)

The appropriate but less-than-commercial title of the new WWII spy thriller "Anthropoid" refers to the film's true-story basis: Operation Anthropoid. This assassination plot by British Special Operations and the Czechoslovak resistance took its name from the Greek word for "having the form of a human." As such the title is about as literal and as figurative as possible: the name of the mission the film depicts, and a reminder of human dignity in opposition to an enemy determined to blot it out via genocide and physical and emotional tortures.

The no-nonsense screenplay by director-producer-cinematographer Sean Ellis ("Cashback") and longtime Stanley Kubrick assistant Anthony Frewin ("Color Me Kubrick") begins in 1941, with two soldiers from the Czechoslovakian army-in-exile parachuting back into German-occupied Czechoslovakia. These are Czech Jan Kubiš (Jamie Dornan of "Fifty Shades of Grey") and Slovak Jozef Gabčík (Cillian Murphy of "Inception"), and they face a daunting task: assassinate SS General Reinhard Heydrich — the Reich's third in command after Hitler and Himmler, the man credited as the principal architect of the Final Solution — in a Prague crawling with Nazis.

Jozef and Jan's contact, "Uncle" Jan Zelenka-Hajsky (Toby Jones) poses a key question: "Is Czechoslovakia still ready and willing to resist Nazi Germany?" Happily, "Anthropoid" determines not to offer any straightforward answer to that question in the process of detailing the true-to-life mission particulars, and teasing out some fictionalized personal drama, mostly in a romantic vein. The mission itself comes at the film's halfway mark, allowing for examination not only of the operation's outcome, but the survival efforts that followed, the Nazi blowback, and the prismatic meaning of the mission as seen in the greater context of the war.

It's all done in a suitably matter-of-fact style that honors the story's historicity. Because of the nature of that story, the film also includes two taut action sequences: the operation itself and a heavy-artillery urban-siege climax. In a likely fictionalized subplot, two women of the resistance aid in the effort, which also serves as a sexual/romantic accelerant as concerns the two men leading the charge. Marie (Charlotte Le Bon) and Lenka (Anna Geislerova) pair up with Jan and Jozef, despite Lenka's assertion "War is not romantic."

Ellis shoots the film in deep-set shadows and filtered hues that cool from earthy to pallid as the heroes' challenges become more dire. Ellis rarely pushes for effect, but when he does (a simple setuppayoff with one character's violin playing, for example), the moment feels right. So while "Anthropoid" tends to the sober and dour, it also breaks into the brutal, the intense, and the emotionally devastating, all the right "moves" for a war story of moral heft compromised by Pyrrhic victory.

Rated R for violence and some disturbing images. Two hours.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code.
