Perfectly unpretentious

MICHELIN-STARRED MADERA IN MENLO PARK OFFERS TOP-NOTCH CUISINE IN RELAXED SURROUNDINGS

By Dale F. Benton

“Sometimes you forget just how good food can taste,” said my dining companion, who was halfway through her appetizer of kampachi yellowtail, kumquat, cherry bomb radish, yuzu, avocado and buttermilk ($21).

The presentation offered by the kitchen at Madera, the Rosewood Sand Hill Hotel’s restaurant, was a work of art, like an ancient Roman grass crown, but edible, more colorful and with a blissful combination of ingredients. My companion stared at the dish for a long moment, then sighed before digging in.

“It was so beautiful, I almost didn’t want to eat it,” she said, “but I’m so glad I did.”

I started with the foie gras terrine ($23) with rhubarb, strawberry and a walnut-and-espresso financier. It wasn’t exactly a terrine, rather a deconstructed extract of what it would have been in the terrine. It looked more like dessert than I had expected. Where was the duck liver?

The chunks of rhubarb held a nice balance of bitter and sweet. The tiny strawberries, I was convinced, had been flown in from France. I was surprised to learn they were grown in Palo Alto. The financier was a small, flavorful almond cake and the tiny pieces of walnut added crunch. But, where was the foie gras? The only other ingredient on the plate looked like dollops of whipped cream. That was the foie gras, cleverly whipped into the cream. The flavors were more subdued than if the liver had been seared — subtle, but not lost. Definitely rich, definitely foie gras, definitely delicious.

Madera, which occupies one wing of the Rosewood in Menlo Park, is bouncing back after losing its Michelin star in 2015. It regained the coveted star last year. Earning a Michelin star is very subjective — especially in the United States — but suffice it to say, it is a mark of distinction but not a guarantee.

Madera is a large airy space with an open kitchen on the left, just beyond hotel reception. The kitchen was strategically placed so the dining room and terrace could maximize sweeping views of the foothills as well as the open sky above. That evening, at dusk, the expansive sky was the color of an iridescent, purplish-pink Easter egg. Breathtaking.

Besides the open kitchen and terrace, Madera boasts a glowing fireplace, well-spaced tables, a vaulted ceiling, upholstered banquettes with comfortable pillows and an ever-buzzing waitstaff. The Rosewood bar is located elsewhere on the property.

I would define the restaurant as elegant-casual. Elegant in its ambiance and fare, casual in the range of attire of the guests. Male dress ranged from sports coats to shabby blue jeans with untucked shirts. Women, by and large, were in dresses and business attire.

In the kitchen is California native and California Culinary Academy graduate Reylon Agustin, whose career has taken him to Michelin-starred restaurants in London working under Gordon Ramsay and in the Bay Area, working under renowned chef and restaurateur Traci Des Jardins. He was appointed Madera’s executive chef earlier this year.

Our waiter greeted us by name. He was knowledgeable, friendly and professional, paced the meal perfectly and attended to all the amenities that define a Michelin-star restaurant.

Soon after we ordered, an amuse-bouche of chilled vichyssoise with drops of mustard oil arrived. It was a nice touch while the sommelier uncorked the wine.

The wine list contains 99 pages of the greatest labels on the planet. Paul Mekis, who made his mark at Plumed Horse in Saratoga, has assembled one of the best wine lists on the Peninsula. Awarded Wine Spectator’s Best of Excellence 2016, it’s an oenophile’s dream. The prices, though, caused heart palpitations. Many of the reds ran into the hundreds, sometimes thousands of dollars per bottle. Fear not; a sommelier does more than build a wine cellar. He or she is expert in finding the perfect pairing that will please both the palate and the pocketbook.

garlic, Sicilian pistachios, black truffle and parmesan — and other ingredients, as no plate was as simple as the menu indicated. There was chard and hedgehog mushrooms, yellow edible flowers and chives. The gnocchi had been sautéed, which turned the Yukon golds more golden and gave the pasta a welcome firmness and texture to match the woodsy shaved truffles. The presentation was beautiful in a black earthenware bowl. Surprisingly, flavors didn't leap from the bowl. Despite the Perigord truffles, the dish was mellow and refined, but each ingredient was evident, central to creating a harmonious whole.

The Schmitz Ranch lamb loin ($41) featured several generous pieces of rare lamb with tiny braised artichoke hearts, eggplant, morels and sea beans, seasoned with Lebanese seven spice. The seared meat was firm but tender, savory but not gamey, and spiced just enough to add a dimension of flavor.

One dessert was crazy good. The kung fu tea chocolate ($12) is served inside a glass filled with soft chocolate ganache, tea ice cream, poached Asian pear and chocolate dacquoise cake. The dessert comes on a small wood tray with a tea pot filled with liquefied chocolate that was then poured into the glass. Chocolate over chocolate over chocolate over pear, what's not to like? As a bonus, there was a white chocolate wafer imprinted with a kicking Bruce Lee at his kung fu best.

Another dessert, the fraise des bois ($12), was a ring of white chocolate mousse, strawberry sorbet and a yogurt sponge cake surrounding a gentle basil coulis. The artistic presentation caused one to pause — but not for long.

The dinner tab for two, three-course meals with wine and tip was $378.

I returned for lunch because I wanted to see what a $20 hamburger was like. The oak-grilled Sand Hill burger with white cheddar, lettuce and applewood bacon on a soft bun was about 4 inches thick. Only a starving python could have wrapped his jaws around that burger. It was really good though, and I didn't need dinner that night.

There was a bit of showmanship pulling into the Rosewood Sand Hill Hotel with Teslas, Porsches and Ferraris lined up, but there's no pretension inside Madera, just pleasant ambiance, great food and a staff eager to please. While prices were high, they were not absurdly so for Michelin-star quality. ▀

MOVIE OPENINGS

Jason Sudeikis and Anne Hathaway star in "Colossal."

Go big and go home

'COLOSSAL' SPINS A WILD FABLE FOR WAYWARD ADULTS

★★★1/2 (Aquarius)

Late last year, the film "A Monster Calls" wove a psychologically instructive tale, about — and primarily for — children, in which a monster served as a conduit for troubling emotions. Spanish writer-director Nacho Vigalondo's new film "Colossal" serves as the grown-up edition of "A Monster Calls" by using a deliberately juvenile premise to speak to adults who need to grow up already and address the issues holding them back.

There's an irony in that the majority of modern moviegoers resemble the characters of "Colossal" — it takes a giant creature to engage their emotional intelligence. Anne Hathaway plays Gloria, a callous, selfish blackout-drunk Manhattanite who, in the film's opening minutes, forfeits her boyfriend (Dan Stevens) and Soho apartment with her last-straw behavior. Gloria returns to her sleepy hometown, moves into her parents' vacant house, and immediately runs into her old schoolmate Oscar (Jason Sudeikis).

It's immediately clear that

Oscar always had a thing for Gloria, which now manifests in his lavishing her with attention, gifts and favors, like a job at the bar he owns and operates. It's also possible that he's his own business's best patron, so he and Gloria bond over post-shift drinking bouts in the company of Oscar's loyal barflies Joel (Austin Stowell) and Garth (Tim Blake Nelson). In one moment of unsparing honesty, Oscar remarks of day-to-day reality, "It's hard not to get bored. I mean, there are ways, but none of them are healthy."

These romantic-comedic goings on share real estate with a world-shaking event: the appearance of a giant, devil-horned creature on the coast of Seoul, South Korea. Gloria discovers that she's linked to this monster — let's just say it's her spirit animal — of which Garth notes, "It keeps moving, destroying everything in its path, but it never looks down." And so we find ourselves, with Gloria, neck deep in an allegory of id. You can hope and pray otherwise, but your inner demons will always come out.

Vigalondo's story allows him to explore 31 flavors of male and female entitlement, including self-loathing, addictive personalities and their post-bender regrets; the insecurities, like neediness and jealousy, behind bullying, domestic abuse, and other relational reckless endangerment; the apocalyptic damage wrought by unaddressed issues, including addiction; and the helplessness of enablers.

"Colossal" makes a left turn from a romantic-comedy (admittedly a dark-tinged one) into something that's two-thirds psychodrama and one-third kaiju movie. In other words, it's pleasingly weird, and a great choice for a star like Hathaway, who can now relax after having bagged her Oscar trophy. Ultimately, Vigalondo spies some hope for the broken, that they can channel their rage, for at least a bit more good than evil. ▀

Rated R for language. One hour, 50 minutes.

another word for hatred of the so-called enemy. And so, when a Frenchman named Adrien (Pierre Niney) begins frequenting the grave of a fallen German soldier named Frantz, he unearths freshly buried resentments. When Frantz's erstwhile fiancée Anna (Paula Beer) spots Adrien leaving flowers on Frantz's sadly empty plot, a not-quite-placeable dread begins to rise in her. Soon, Adrien enters into the lives of Anna and Frantz's parents. He explains that he was a bosom friend to Frantz (portrayed in flashbacks by Anton von Lucke) in Paris, when Frantz was stationed there, but there's obviously more to his story than meets the eye. Of course, certain truths about Frantz and Adrien will come out, further complicating the burgeoning relationships between Adrien and Anna, and Adrien and Frantz's parents. "Frantz" unfolds at a stately pace, with a controlled mood fostered by psychologically incisive performances all around. Rated PG-13 for thematic elements including brief war violence. One hour, 53 minutes. — P.C.
